

A Young Soldier ...

Nam, because we are fighting to preserve freedom and to end all wars.

What are you doing about it? Also in the article I read, students were going to take up a collection to send our enemies. Well, go and ask our parents, and the parents of our friends who have lost their lives trying to end the war, to contribute. Then wait until we get home, if we do, and ask us, if you can find the nerve.

What you really need is a good spanking, and taken out from behind "mother's skirt," and have your eyes opened to what the Communists are trying to do to the world, and then maybe you will know "what we are doing in Viet Nam."

Letters to the Editor

Johnson's audience were interested enough in open discussion on Viet Nam to attend this late session. The forum was interesting and significant. It was a University experience, a rare one and a badly-missed one. But no campus press coverage! The Emerald staff is either unexcusably careless or is guilty of news management to fit its own opinions.

Technical problems precluded the inclusion of stories on the questions which followed Mr. Johnson's speech and the forum. Space limitation forced the exclusion of the question and answer period from the story on the speech and final copy deadlines made it impossible to get the forum story in Wednesday's Emerald. The story appears on page one in this issue—The Editor

Panhellenic Replies

Once a year the Emerald deems as its duty to make a frontal attack on the Greeks, and this year is no exception. I am not writing this letter in vengeance, but more with the hope of enlightening some misinformed readers.

My first reference is to the editorial of Oct. 11, 1965 entitled "Housing Causes Pledge Rise." The primary disappointment in this article was the misusage of a statement which I made to an Emerald reporter during an interview about three weeks ago. Ordinarily, I do not mind being interviewed, quoted or even referred to, and I suppose I even take the risk of being misinterpreted. However, I was more than misinterpreted; my statement was taken completely out of its original context and was used to Mr. Beggs' advantage in reaching the illogical conclusion that the cause for the pledge rise was due to the housing shortage.

Granted, I acknowledge the fact that the housing shortage may have encouraged an upper-class girl to pledge a house during rush. However, at the time she signed up for rush (during this summer) had she been concerned about finding housing, she could have applied for a dorm reservation or found an apartment at the same time.

Also, at this same time, the overwhelming increase of the University population was unforeseen even by officials. So, the question about housing was not really evident when the upper-class girl decided to sign up for rush and is not a logical reason that upper-class girls decided to apply for rush.

However, during rush, it was mentioned that there was a problem of housing and upper-class women were encouraged to pledge a house at this time. But, upper-class women comprised only 14 per cent of all the rushees going through rush this fall. In your reasoning you forgot to take into account that freshmen women are assured of a dorm space their first year, and therefore, did not feel any pressure from the housing aspect. So this could not have effected their decision to pledge a house. Admittedly, there was a rise in the number of upper-class women who pledged, but they comprised a very small percentage of all who went through rush.

Our statistics show that there are two more basic and more significant reasons for the increase of pledges this year which I emphatically pointed out in my interview: (1) simply that there was a greater number of women going through rush and therefore a greater number who pledged; and (2) that there will be no spring rush this academic year and girls were very strongly urged to pledge now.

Besides, Mr. Beggs, what individual who abhors a group living situation, who isn't willing to accept responsibility or to living up to certain standards, is so bold as to sign up for rush merely to have a roof over his head?

Furthermore, in general reference to the Emerald of Friday, Oct. 15, 1965, and more specifically the editorial, permit me to amend your erroneous criticism of the sorority judicial system.

In the first place, the Panhellenic Judiciary Board did its authoritative duty last spring when a house violated the Student Conduct Code and was penalized accordingly. Admittedly, there was a "slip up" in the routine handling of such cases which resulted in the partial misunderstanding and partial oversight in reporting our judiciary actions to the Conduct Committee.

However, there was no intentional disobedience involved, nor was there any attempt to apply sanctions behind the back of the Conduct Committee. When we were informed of the oversight, the necessary steps were taken to make right our wrong. The Judiciary Board chairman, Judy Grankey, reported to the Conduct Committee who approved the action that had been taken last spring. To judge the sorority judicial system as uncooperative, and unwilling to live up to the Code on the basis of one circumstance is quite an undeserved criticism.

The matter remains that there was error; however, steps have been taken to avoid mistakes in the future, and we have every intention of cooperating with the Student Conduct Committee.
