

Snoball...

 the Emerald that his suggestions to finance the dance in a different manner were rejected "because there wasn't enough time to change anything."

The Snoball is scheduled for Jan. 29.

Roger Gould, freshman class president, told the Emerald that it was almost impossible to finance the Snoball another way this year because of time limitations. He also said that if the dance was financed through ticket sales, students would have to be charged more per ticket than the 50-cent-per-person charge that has been suggested.

Gould also noted that it would be possible to "deficit spend" to support the dance, but that would mean that the freshman class would be about "$1,000 in the hole" after the dance, he said. This deficit would have to be made up by the class by other class functions during their four-year tenure at the University. He said that the class may have to resort to deficit spending, if things don't clear up.

Gould told the Emerald Wednesday that members of Decou Hall would "probably not be allowed to attend the Snoball" if they don't agree to pay the tax. A. L. "Si" Ellingson, director of the Student Union, expressed the same sentiments Tuesday evening.

Some Guests, Others Pay

Kingslien told the Emerald that he thought that some of the residents of his dormitory would want to attend the dance. He said he hoped they would be allowed to pay 50 cents per person for the dance.

Actually, only 71 per cent of the freshman class lives in the dormitories; the others live off-campus or in co-operatives. Only the freshman dormitory residents will be assessed for the dance; the others are invited to the Snoball as guests of the dormitory residents.

It appears definite that residents of individual dorm units who have voted not to pay the 50-cent tax as a unit will not have to pay it. However, there are some questions about trying to exclude certain members of the freshman class from attending the all-class dance.

The questions are: How do you check to see who attends? Also, can anyone legally exclude these students from attending? Especially if they are willing to pay their 50 cents out of their own pockets? Who can make such a decision?

Study Offered In Scandinavia

The Scandinavian Seminar study program in Denmark, Finland, Norway, and Sweden is now accepting applications for the academic year 1966-67.

The student stays with a Scandinavian family at the outset, speaking the language daily, and sharing its activities in the community. For the major part of the year he lives and studies at a folkhøjskole—a residential school for young adults. Except during the general seminar and language courses, he is entirely separated from his fellow American students.

At the folkhøjskole particular attention is given to the value of the Scandinavian cultural heritage in today's changing world. After the student has acquired a working knowledge of the language, he is able to devote considerable time to independent study and research in the field of his major interest, which culminates in the presentation of a project paper.

For further information, write to Scandinavian Seminar, 140 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019.

Svensden Publishes

A paper by Kester Svendsen, head of the English department, will appear in the next issue of the American Comparative Literature Association Newsletter. Entitled "Milton as a Comparatist," the paper was originally delivered at a meeting of the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast at Santa Barbara in 1961.

Faculty Senators Bar PSC Paper

PORTLAND (Special)—Faculty senators unanimously rejected a request from the Portland State College student newspaper, the Vanguard, to cover their Monday meeting.

In a memo to the senate, the Vanguard asked for an exception to a long-standing rule that the press not be allowed in faculty senate meetings.

Discussion of the State Legislature's Mosser plan to reward and encourage outstanding undergraduate teachers was on the meeting's agenda. The senate took no action on the question, but may consider it again in February.

The Vanguard memo said, in part:

"... we think it is important that the faculty senate's views be made known in the Vanguard. We believe that Portland State's action on the Mosser plan is of prime significance both to the college community and to the public. The best assurance of accurate coverage is that the reporter know the background of the story."

Few Comments

Assistants to PSC President Branford P. Millar told the Vanguard afterward that when the request was read to the senate by the president, there were "very few" comments, and the request was unanimously rejected by voice vote.

Two points were made by faculty members during the brief discussion.

- If the Vanguard is allowed into faculty senate meetings, so must be the public press.

- The Vanguard has available to it the minutes of the meetings recorded by the senate secretary. (Vanguard representatives said those minutes are fairly complete but that they do not attribute statements to individual faculty members).

In a similar case, the Emerald and the Eugene Register-Guard were denied admittance to University faculty discussion of the Mosser plan last term.

The Vanguard plans to make another request to Millar that it be allowed to attend all faculty meetings. Monday's request involved only that one meeting.

The Vanguard said Millar was curious as to the seriousness of their intentions of covering the meeting, since the Vanguard has not indicated much interest before.

Portland State has already approved a plan for distribution of the $1,000 Mosser awards but the college may re-evaluate it. The State Emergency Board's decision to cut the Mosser award money to meet the higher education enrollments crisis cut PSC's awards to 30.
