

'Next' Goes on Sale; Winter Deadline Set

The fall issue of "Next," the student literary magazine, goes on sale today at the Student Union. The magazine can also be purchased at the Campus Book Store, the Co-op, and the Sundog Book Store.

Featured in the issue are short stories by Bill Roecker and John Noland, a play by Duane Ackerson, and poetry by Albert Drake, Walt Greenwood, F. J. Haskins, John Hawkes, Richard Johnson, William Lovell, Bob McCall, Alan Mitchell, R. Nudo, Rita Reynolds, Sylvia Rogndahl, Hallett Stromholt, and Frank Thompson. Art work has been done by Rick Campbell and Michael Glover.

"Next" is now using a more expensive printing process, allowing more copy per page with more clarity and resulting in a more attractive finished product. The magazine, which sells for 40 cents, has been printed in an edition of 1,000 copies. The two editions printed last year were sold out shortly after going on sale.

"Next" is now accepting manuscripts and other works of art for consideration for the winter issue. Manuscripts may be left in the "Next" box in the SU box-office, M-101, or at the "Next" office, Room 15 SU.

Deadline for the winter issue will be approximately the middle of February. Anyone interested in working as a staff member should come to the office at 4 p.m. Thursday, with the exception of today. Meetings are held at this time.

Poverty Conference . . .

rich and poor areas. He'll discuss "Cybernetics: Present Theory, Future Promise." He was with the Organization for European Economic Co-operation until 1957 when he left it to study the effects of abundance on the American economy.

Pearl represents the view that education and training is the solution to the poverty problem. He'll discuss "New Careers as a Solution to Poverty." He has worked with the VISTA program—the Johnson administration's "domestic Peace Corps"—at the University, worked in research in alcoholism and narcotics in California, and was deputy director of the New York State Committee for Youth and associate director of Howard University's Center for Youth and Community Studies. He has published many articles on delinquency and school dropouts.

Starts Wednesday

Starting Wednesday a series of four panel discussions will be televised over Private Line 3 and will discuss four speakers and their approaches to poverty. The schedule of those discussions:

Nov. 12—James Klonoski, associate professor of political science; Clyde DeBerry, Eugene CORE chairman, and Bill Camp, junior in political science, will discuss Alinsky. James Tysell, freshman in pre-law, will moderate the panel.

Nov. 17 at 9 p.m.—Barry Siegal, associate professor of economics and two other unnamed panelists will discuss Lampman. Al Depenbrock, freshman in political science, will moderate.

Nov. 20 at 8 p.m., Robert Paul, instructor in philosophy; Lindo Campbell, graduate in economics; and Student Union Director A. L. "Si" Ellingson will discuss Theobald.

Nov. 29 at 9 p.m.—Charles Dumars, senior in psychology, and another unnamed panelist, will discuss Pearl.

Free for Students

University students, faculty, and staff will be admitted to all sessions free of charge. Others will pay a $2.50 registration fee which will include a copy of the published conference proceedings. Admission to individual sessions will be 75 cents. Those not paying the $2.50 registration fee will be able to buy the published record for $1.

The schedule for the conference, which will be augmented by luncheons, etc., and possibly another session sponsored by VISTA will be:

Jan. 27—8 a.m., registration; 8:45 a.m., opening by University President Arthur S. Flemming; 9 a.m., Arthur Pearl, "New Careers as a Solution to Poverty," followed by a discussion at 10:45 a.m.; 1:30 p.m., Robert Lampman, "An Economist Looks at Poverty," followed by a discussion at 3:15 p.m.; 7:30 p.m., Saul Alinsky, "Action for Equality," followed by a discussion at 9:15.

Jan. 28—9 a.m., Robert Theobald, "Cybernetics: Present Theory, Future Promise," followed by a discussion; 1 p.m., debate among all four speakers.

Sherwood Publishes

Two reviews by John C. Sherwood, professor of English, have been published in The Sixth Mental Measurements Yearbook. The reviews are "English Expression: Cooperative English Tests (1960 Revision)" and "Test of English Usage."

NY Teachers' Strike Sees Dwindling Support

NEW YORK (AP) — Pickets marched Tuesday at the twin campus of St. John's University, on the third day of a teachers union strike against the nation's largest Roman Catholic college.

Teachers, students and trade unionists picketed the campuses in Jamaica, Queens, and Brooklyn Tuesday in a strike touched off by the pre-holiday dismissal of 31 professors.

Strike leaders, in an early morning statement Wednesday, accused the university of issuing a series of "absurd statements" on the walkout's effectiveness.

Strike leaders Tuesday claimed a complete success in their efforts to shatter the teaching schedule at the school. University officials said the strike was a flop.

The AFL-CIO Federation of College Teachers maintained that "teaching is impossible under present conditions at the university."

Mayor John Lindsay offered to provide mediators to help iron out the dispute which has been simmering since last spring.

The Rev. Joseph Tinnelly, special counsel to the university's Board of Trustees, turned down the offer on the grounds that "bargaining, mediation and the like are appropriate in many other areas, but are not appropriate in the academic areas."

The picketing went on Tuesday without incident. There were no reports of violence at either campus.

Father Tinnelly estimated that about 90 per cent of the university's 18,000 regular students showed up for class, despite a citywide subway and bus strike which kept the school from reopening Monday as scheduled.

He also said only 43 of the school's 651 teachers had failed to show up for their assigned classes. Normally about 25 professors are absent on any given day, he said.

Israel Kugler, president of the union, had a different version of the strike. He said 200 teachers were absent.

"The normal education process has ceased at both the Jamaica and Brooklyn campuses," he said shortly after the strike began.

The Very Rev. Joseph Cahill, university president, said the "full educational program" continued without interruption.

The union said representatives of the Electrical Workers, Taxi Drivers and Communications Workers unions marched in the picket lines.

The 31 professors were notified before leaving on the Christmas holidays that their teaching contracts would not be renewed when they ran out in the coming months.

The school accused most of the professors dismissed of "unprofessional conduct" in their drive against alleged lack of academic freedom.

Course Offered For Inspection

A short course for public works construction inspectors will be presented at the University Thursday evening from Jan. 6 to Feb. 24.

The training program is designed to acquaint the participants with the importance of the inspector's job, the basic field procedure to be followed and records to be kept, and modern methods of testing compliance with specifications.

Slated for 7 to 10 p.m. in Room 101 Commonwealth, the course is sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education of the State System of Higher Education, the American Public Works Association, and the Bureau of Municipal Research and Service at the University.

Certificates issued by the American Public Works Association will be awarded to those who successfully complete the course.

Checks for the $30 registration fee should be made payable to Continuing Education. Persons wishing to register for the course may contact the Eugene Center for Continuing Education, Education Annex, University of Oregon, 342-1411, ext. 2195.

To Present Paper

Julian Palley, associate professor of Romance languages at the University, presented a paper at the annual national meeting of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese in Chicago December 28 on "Archetypal Symbols in Bodas de Sangre."
