University Plans Study Exchange

A European program in business administration will be offered for the second time next year by the University's School of Business Administration in cooperation with the Netherlands Institute for Foreign Representation (N.O.I.B.) in Bruekelen, the Netherlands.

The exchange program was initiated this fall when 28 University male students began a year's study at the Netherlands institute and 18 Dutch students arrived here.

Edwin F. Beal, professor of management, and Willem Grader, exchange professor from the Netherlands institute, are supervising the exchange students at the N.O.I.B. and the University respectively.

The program was developed to provide the best possible training for young men in international business management. It serves to promote knowledge and understanding of business principles and methods in a foreign environment.

Dwaine Richins, associate professor of business economics at the University, will supervise Oregon students at the N.O.I.B. during the 1966-67 academic year. Students interested in applying for the program should contact him.

Male students majoring in business administration who will be within 10 term hours of junior standing by the fall of 1966 and who have satisfactory grades may qualify if they meet other requirements.

Although courses at the N.O.I.B. will be taught in English, applicants must have at least one year of college-level work or two years of high-school level work, or the equivalent, in a foreign language, preferably French, Spanish, or German. The necessary foreign language work may be taken after acceptance in the program, but must be completed before the student leaves the United States.

Students enrolled in institutions other than the University are also eligible for the program.

A maximum of 30 students from the University will study at the N.O.I.B. during the 1966-67 academic year. Their program will include business administration courses from Richens, the American exchange professor, and at least one foreign language, a selection from N.O.I.B. courses, a work-study period of one month, industrial case studies, and a field trip.

During the work-study period, the American students will spend one month with a business concern in Europe. The 10 to 12 day field trip will allow them to visit the various agencies for European economic and political integration in Brussels, Luxembourg, Strassbourg, and Paris.

Students will be able to earn from 42 to 48 credit hours during the academic year.

Total cost for the program is $2,900, including room and board, tuition, round-trip transportation, health insurance, personal expenses, books and N.O.I.B. fees. Non-Oregon residents must also pay $570 for the out-of-state tuition fee.

A non-refundable $10 fee for processing is charged for each application filed.
