

Correction

The dates of the panel discussions in connection with the poverty conference were erroneously printed in Thursday's Emerald. The correct dates for the discussions, which will be televised over Private Line 3 are as follows:

● Jan. 12—James Klonoski, associate professor of political science; Clyde DeBerry, Eugene CORE chairman; and Bill Camp, junior in political science, will discuss Saul Alinsky, nationally known organizer of community projects. James Tysell, freshman in pre-law, will moderate the panel.

● Jan. 17 at 9 p.m.—Barry Siegal, associate professor of economics, and two other unnamed panelists will discuss Robert J. Lampman, member of President Kennedy's Council of Economic Advisers. Al Depenbrock, freshman in political science, will moderate.

● Jan. 20 at 8 p.m.—Robert Paul, instructor in philosophy; Lindo Campbell, graduate in economics; and SU Director A. L. "Si" Ellingson will discuss Robert Theobald, British economist.

● Jan. 29 at 9 p.m.—Charles Dumars, senior in psychology, and another unnamed panelist, will discuss Arthur Pearl, University professor of education and an authority on poverty education.

Music School Sets January Events

Dean Wickham Notes 'Unusual' Dorm Set-Up

"Everywhere we went," said Golda Wickham, dean of women, "there were electrical storms, rains, and floods. In Italy, the rain drove poisonous vipers from the hills... I hope we didn't cause all this."

Mrs. Wickham, who was speaking at the Thursday meeting of the Eugene Mothers Club, has returned from sabbatical leave, which included traveling in seven European and Middle Eastern countries.

One of the things Mrs. Wickham noted about her tour, which included several European universities, was the increasing interest the British have been showing in what their students are doing and where they are living.

"When we (she and her husband) were there in 1954 it seemed that the students just matriculated and got their grades," she said. "The universities didn't care where the students lived or what they did."

Now most of the British universities are building student unions and dormitories, financed by government subsidies, she said.

Another feature of the British universities, especially the University of London, Mrs. Wickham mentioned, was their unusual placement system for housing. She said they have a different attitude about discrimination. They put students with similar interests together in the same dormitories.

"If a student is a Mennonite and plays the piano, she said, 'they will hunt through the files and match him up in a dorm with other Mennonites and a piano.'"

Other countries toured by Mrs. Wickham, her husband, brother, and sister-in-law included France, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and the Holy Land.

They returned to the U.S. Nov. 30, a month earlier than planned, so she could help with grading at the end of last term, she said.

Loggan Named To J-School

Frank Loggan of Bend, veteran Oregon broadcaster, has been named general manager of the Oregon Association of Broadcasters (OAB).

Loggan succeeds Karl Nestvold, OAB general manager for the past four years, who has been appointed to a full-time position in the University School of Journalism.

In his new position, Loggan will be chief administrative official of the broadcasting trade association of Oregon radio and television stations.

Concurrent with his appointment to OAB, is Loggan's appointment to the University journalism faculty as a lecturer in broadcast station management and radio-television advertising. The latter appointment is subject to State Board of Higher Education confirmation.

Loggan, a graduate of the University School of Journalism, was general manager and owner of radio station KBND in Bend for 37 years until he sold the station earlier this year. He was advertising director of the Bend Bulletin for 20 years before going into broadcasting.

He has served both as director and president of OAB, and as director of the Oregon Advertising Club. He is a past president of both the Bend and Central Oregon Chamber of Commerce. Currently, he is chairman of the Oregon State Highway Commission Travel Advisory Committee, and director of the Oregon State Motor Association.

Loggan's appointment as OAB manager, announced by OAB President Les Smith of Portland, was effective Jan. 1, as was his appointment in the School of Journalism.
