

Open Letter to Students From Sargent Shriver

Dear Students:

Five years ago, in a campaign speech at the San Francisco Cow Palace, John F. Kennedy first proposed the idea of a Peace Corps. He conceived of it as a group of Americans who would be willing to put their middle-level skills to use for two years in developing nations around the world.

Today, five years after Kennedy's Cow Palace speech, the University of Oregon is one of the nation's leaders in terms of the number of Volunteers it has contributed to the Peace Corps.

Right now, 100 Oregon graduates are overseas, living examples of American friendship and concern to the people of 33 countries. They are sharing their knowledge and skills with the eager students of Malawi and Turkey, the subsistence farmers of the Dominican Republic and Sierra Leone, and the exploited Indians of Chile and Peru. Another 46 Oregon graduates already have returned from their two years of Peace Corps service. In all, 146 Oregon Volunteers have served or are serving in 42 developing nations of Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

But what is past is prologue. The Peace Corps needs more Oregon men and women. We need more because nations all over the world are asking for help.

This is an unrivaled opportunity for qualified Americans to help themselves and their country. Won't you help?

Sincerely,
Sargent Shriver
Former Director Peace Corps

and said that we must take Johnson's actions at their face value; otherwise we would get nowhere.

The next question to be brought up was whether or not we should publicly support and thank Johnson for stopping the bombing. The discussion lasted several hours and I will be able to give only the briefest summary of this exciting debate.

The radicals' viewpoint can be best summarized by quoting D. E. Barrymore, Sr.: "But morally we cannot support Johnson! We all know that he is just being politically opportunistic and pragmatic." The moderates carried the issue by their point that, as much of some of us may dislike the idea, we too must be pragmatic. We must be consistent and react favorably when we are given what we demanded.

The radicals wanted to have a protest rally anyway, demanding that the U.S. recognize the AFL-CIO. They pointed out that they had joined a protest movement and they expected to be allowed to protest, to denounce the government's policies. It took considerable time before these hawks would be dissuaded from having a rally. Particularly unhappy was one youth who was told that in any case he could not carry a sign saying "Win, Win with Ho Chin Minh!" We do have to think of our public image.

The meeting closed on the conciliatory note that we would send a cunning telegram that would be composed by the psychologist. This wily professor will so word the telegram that Johnson will not only negotiate, but recognize the NLF (Viet Cong) and provide for self-determination of the South Vietnamese people in addition to removing all the U.S. troops; otherwise Johnson will look like a fink in the eyes of the world. (He is already a fink in the eyes of the N.A.I.V.E.).

So the crisis was revolved, we are still going to be a protest group, actively advocating peace and justice, morality and freedom, with liberty and equality for all!

Emerald Accomplishment
Emerald Editor:

Blundering, bungling, bumbling,
Stumbling into the lower depths
Of new reporting,
Sorting, distorting, retorting . . .

Unfortunately, there is little else that the Emerald does, so we are going to conclude our comments at this point.

Dubious Achievement

Emerald Editor:

Letters of commendation for dubious achievements go to both the news department of the Emerald and to Scott Bartlett this week.

The news department (assuming there is such an animal) managed to spell Sue Rathbun's (she's the new little colonel) name 75 per cent of the time it appeared in the paper over the past two months. They managed to spell Lt. Col. John Kreitz' name wrong 100 per cent of the time it appeared and changed Jan. 15 to a Friday. We all have problems, and although the Emerald is the recognized heartbeat of the University, I maintain that they cannot invent a calendar without rationalizing some place.

For Mr. Bartlett: Who is in the Kool Aid generation? Seems to me that one who fails to get support for his pet project should not invoke the names of various gods, large and small, and resort to name-calling to get us out and support something we do not believe in. When I returned to find that slip of paper on my desk asking for, in generous terms, support for something other than what the president intended, I berated my roommate for not throwing you out bodily. I might note that you are mistaken. People give a damn, but it's bloody well on the other side.

High School Seniors To Visit UO

Duck Preview at the University Saturday will allow Oregon high school seniors and their parents an opportunity to become acquainted with the University and what it offers.

Seniors and parents who plan the one-day visitation have been urged to pre-register by Friday.

Sweetster-Chi Psi Duo Wins in College Bowl

The team of Chi Psi and Sweetster Hall swept to a decisive victory in the University College Bowl Tuesday night.

The team defeated the ATO-Collier Hall team by a score of 130-60, in the competition, broadcast over PL-3, the University's closed circuit television line.

The match was the fifth in the first round of competition in a single elimination tournament now being conducted.

First round winners so far include Kappa Sigma-Carson IV, Theta Chi-Pi Beta Phi, Phi Delta Theta-University House, and Sigma Nu-Robbins Hall.

Those who have not received registration material or cannot obtain it at their high schools should contact the Office of Admissions at the University immediately.

One of the main features of Duck Preview will be the school and departmental meetings designed to acquaint the seniors with course offerings and requirements, and allow them to tour the facilities.

Special events have also been planned for parents who want to learn more about the University. They may choose to attend two sessions from among the special section meetings offered by professional schools and departments, a joint session conducted by the deans of men and women, and a panel presentation by housing representatives.

Free time will be available for the visitors to tour the campus and visit such offices as those of financial aids, academic advising, housing, the deans of men and women, and open houses at freshman dormitory units. Conducted tours will be offered throughout the day at the University Library.

Fee for both registration and a noon luncheon is $2; cost of registration alone is $1.

Visiting Professor To Lecture On Art

Morris Yarowsky, visiting professor of art in the University School of Architecture and Allied Arts, will give the third lecture in a series of faculty lectures on Friday. His topic is "Image and Meta-Image in Contemporary Painting."

The public is invited to hear the lecture at 8 p.m. in room 106 Lawrence Hall.

Iranian Student Group Elects New Officers

New officers of the Iranian Student Association were elected Sunday. They are R. Kamali, president; J. Akouny, vice president; H. Djalaly, secretary; A. Shadatza, social chairman; R. Oghalai, treasurer.

dents, the recruiters stated 70 per cent of all Peace Corps volunteers are liberal arts graduates. "With a liberal arts background," said Butler, "you can do a great deal to help these developing countries, such as filling secondary teaching roles in Latin America after three months of Peace Corps training."

Presently the Peace Corps is operating in 46 countries.

Recruiters at the University for Peace Corps Week have signed 240 students to take aptitude tests later in the week. The sign-up exceeds the 1965 Peace Corps Week by over 120, and exceeds a similar drive at Oregon State University by over 100.

Class visitations, a movie, and tests continue until Friday. Testing will continue through Tuesday.
