The war is on! Friday evening and Saturday afternoon the Oregon State Beavers and the Oregon Ducks will continue their long rivalry, this time on the hardwood, with a pair of basketball games.

First, the Ducks, 5-6, will travel to Corvallis for an 8 p.m. encounter at Gill Coliseum, and then Saturday afternoon the Ducks will host OSU in a regionally televised affair at McArthur Court beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Although these games will not count in the PAC league standings, both teams will be after the coveted Chancellor's Trophy which annually goes to the team that wins the season series.

The Ducks will be very eager for the Beavers as they would like to wrest that trophy from OSU. As it stands, the Beavers have won the symbol of supremacy 12 of the 13 times it has been up for grabs since the inauguration in 1953.

"Much Stronger"

Looking at the Beavers, Duck coach Steve Belko remarks that "they are much stronger than last year, and they have good board play." Once again the Beavers, 9-4, under coach Paul Valenti this season, are a well drilled and very slow, deliberate team. They are very disciplined.

Belko reports that the Ducks have been working against a zone defense during practice this week and that he is doing this mainly out of necessity. He does expect them to go mainly man-to-man but they might sneak in with a zone. He also said that he cannot remember a Paul Valenti team using a zone defense.

Belko has also primed his charges against the press. He was not satisfied with their performance against the press used by WSU last weekend and has tried to rectify that situation in practice.

"Our main problem will be their over-all balance," said Belko. "We must take the good shots because if we miss we may not be able to get the ball back for awhile." And it's pretty hard to score without the ball.

Captained by White

Looking at the OSU personnel coach Paul Valenti's team is captained by Charlie White, a 6-4, 189-pound senior from Detroit, Mich. He is a transfer from Monterey JC in California.

White is considered by Belko to be one of the most dangerous players on the Beaver team. White can lead the offense, shoot, and handle the ball about as well as any guard in the league. Last year he was the second highest scorer with 250 points and had 183 rebounds.

So far this year White has been instrumental in leading the Beavers to a 3-1 league record and first place tie with Stanford and UCLA. Against SC White dumped in more than 20 points to pull the Beavers out of a tight situation. His defensive play has been outstanding.

Loy Petersen, a sophomore transfer from Pepperdine College in Los Angeles, has also been good for the Beavers. The 6-5, 190-pound forward, took a lot of the scoring in the first few games but recently has been somewhat quiet. Coach Belko is hoping to keep him that way over the weekend.

Before the season started Petersen was rated an outstanding sophomore prospect, one of the best seen at OSU of all time.

IM Schedule

Basketball

3:50—Court 40, McAllister B vs. Douglas B.
Court 43, Dymont B vs. Clark B.
4:35—Court 40, DeCou B vs. Counselors B.
Court 43, Pi Kappa Alpha B vs. Chi Phi B.
5:15—Court 40, Sigma Nu B vs. Phi Gamma Delta B.
Court 43, Kappa Sigma B vs. Tau Kappa Epsilon B.
Handball
4:00—DeCou vs. Hawaiians.
4:45—Phi Gamma Delta vs. Parsons.

He is a fine shooter and can hit with both hands. His only deficiency is experience and he has picked up a lot of that so far this season.

Belko also had praise for Rich Whelan, a seasoned veteran with an improved shooting eye and good ball handling techniques. "Whelan is a definite shooting threat," Belko said. Scott Eaton at 6-3 and 192 pounds is another Beaver to watch. Eaton is a much improved shooter from last year who possess terrific speed and good defensive player.

The only other thing, if these weren't enough already, that worries Belko is the Beaver's bench strength.

Coach Paul Valenti has named Eaton, White, Fredenburg, Whelan and either Petersen or Harry Gunner to start Friday's game.

Closed Practices

All this time the Ducks have not been standing still. During the week Belko has held closed practices and worked very hard. Tuesday night the Ducks worked long and hard, deviating from their usual early week programs.

Wednesday the Ducks worked hard but not as long and plan to close our drills with a short workout Thursday afternoon. Belko usually doesn't like to work his teams too long and hard because injuries tend to crop up easier and the players get tired.

One of Belko's biggest concerns was Bob Craven, the 6-7 forward from South Eugene who has been coming into his own in the last couple of weekends. Craven is suffering from an infection but reports indicate that he will probably be ready.

The Ducks are also looking for Nick Jones to continue his upward swing into stride. The jitterbugging Ducks scored 27 points last weekend and showed flashes of his fine sophomore form. His defense on the tough Washington and WSU guards was tremendous. Another good effort from Jones will be a great asset to the whole team.

The continued fine play of guard Dave Kafoury has also been a big boost to the Duck attack. The 6-0 senior from Cleveland High in Portland has turned in fine performances of late, including some fine clutch shooting from long range and good defensive work.

Then there is Jim Barnett, the noblest Duck of them all. Barnett turned in some of the finest plays seen in recent years last weekend at Mac Court with his fine shooting and ball handling abilities. And all of this with those sore fingers of his still-cushioned hand with foam rubber and tape.

Barnett led the Ducks to two weekend wins against WSU and Washington with a total 44 point effort and fine all-around play. With this in mind Paul Valenti of OSU will have his hands full trying to defend the flashy Duck and hold the Oregon scoring machine for the weekend.
