

National Student Projects Offer Summer Job

A summer of service, education, and unusual experiences can be found in National Student YWCA and YMCA projects. Students must sign up by 1 p.m. Tuesday in the Y office, Gerlinger, for summer jobs in New York City community service, a USA-USSR exchange, civil rights projects, peace caravans, U.S. work camps, summer projects abroad, voluntary international service assignments, and ministry positions in U.S. national parks. Some projects offer scholarships to volunteers.

The New York city project is open to men and women students who have completed at least one year of college. From June 22 to Aug. 19, students live in New York's lower East Side working in community centers, or in social agencies wrestling with the sprawling city's problems. Weekly seminars are conducted by the New York City School for Social Research, and field trips supplement the seminars. Volunteers are paid a stipend for the work, covering room and board fees.

Civil Rights projects take volunteers for work in rural and urban areas on voter registration workshops, tutoring and work projects. Eighteen years is the minimum age on some projects; others require two years of college.

On the Peace Caravan, members tour the U. S., speaking on current approaches to peace community groups. This project requires at least one year of college. The volunteer is given maintenance and travel costs.

Students with a globe-trotting bent, between 20 and 30 years old, and with two years to invest should investigate the offerings of Voluntary International Service Assignments Members work two years in VISA agencies in host countries. The work includes assisting local community development, and teaching reading, writing, or nutrition. Germany, Guatemala, India, Tanzania, and the U.S. have VISA projects.

Europe, Africa, the Far East, Mexico, and Latin America are the areas covered by summer projects abroad international work camps open to college students with language facility. A more local program, in the United States, is the Institutional Service units, taking workers for institutions for mentally ill and retarded people. Two years of college is usually required for this program.

In the Ninth Annual USA-USSR Exchange, Face to Face, upperclass and graduate students spend 40 days in the Republics of Russia—the Georgian, Armenian, and Ukrainian Republics. Talks are held with political, economic, and educational officials in Moscow, and Leningrad. The exchange is from mid-July to late August.

Ministry positions at national parks are open to college students. Students are part time resort workers in addition to their ministry duties. Married couples are also needed in this program.

not competent to make that decision."

The final vote on the amendment to Section II.A.8. and another to II.B.4 will be at the Wednesday meeting, if possible.

In other business Friday, the Committee heard a report from Andy Jordan of the Inter-Fraternity Council Tribunal that one fraternity had been taken off social probation and another had gone on.

Social Probation

The house taken off "pro" had been on for two and a half months, after a sentence of indefinite probation for an offense involving a raid.

Jordan reported that the probation, which eliminated any social functions, "was seen to be affecting, in a bad sort of way, their pledge class, and that the punishment had really served its purpose."

A cocktail party involving an underage woman put the other fraternity on social pro for a term. It was deprived of privileges of having any women in the house or any social functions whether involving co-eds or not.

Off-campus Party

Jordan said the pre-party cocktail party occurred off-campus, and that it involved no arrests.

Eassey said this is the "typical pattern we have been plagued with as far as off-campus is concerned."

He said an amendment is up for the Code and that a position should be taken by the Committee on those kind of functions.

Eassey said he had "heard indirectly" that the Student Activities Committee may be formulating some plan to deal with this problem.
