

Library School Wins Board Approval . . .

experience had shown that the $15 had not been adequate, and that some incidental charges such as library fines may be raised soon.

New students and transfers will pay the fee prior to registering, and will forfeit it if they do not complete registration. Old students will continue to pay during registration. The fee is still refundable at the end of the academic year.

Dormitory charges were raised $50 at all state schools.

The increase was needed to offset the loss of student building fees due to a legislative decision last year which ruled that the fee could be used for both academic and self-liquidating buildings, as well as to meet rising food costs.

Library School

The University's School of Librarianship, approved in principle by the faculty last week, will be the first new professional school on the Eugene campus since the School of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation was founded in 1920.

The School will offer a master of librarianship degree, to train public, school, and college librarians, in a 48-credit hour program.

Facilities for the new school will be in the Library annex currently under construction. Costs will be met from the University's present budget.

Figures were cited indicating that nearly 130,000 librarians are needed each year for school libraries alone.

The School of Education has previously offered M.A. and M.S. degrees in librarianship, but not a specific degree in the field.

Two other curricular requests were approved for the University:

- A doctor of music arts (DMA) program, to train college-level music teachers.

- M.A. and Ph.D. programs in comparative literature. This is now an inter-departmental program between the department of English and the division of modern and classical languages, but offering no specific degree.

Neither program involves any staff or budget additions.

In other action the Board:

- Approved an allocation of $2 to Student Union operations for each student enrolled in Division of Continuing Education courses on a given campus who takes one to four credit hours, and $4 for each student taking five hours or more.

- Approved an $8,000 University request for air-conditioning refrigeration units for Villard Hall.

- Authorized the University to apply for a $34,500 advance from the federal government to cover planning costs for the first building of the Behavioral Science complex.

The building, a classroom, office, and teaching center, will be part of a three-unit complex located between the Education Building and the Veteran's dormitories, near the Pioneer Cemetery. The first building will be on the state system's 1967-69 priority list for the next Legislature.

- Authorized Oregon State to buy one lot of 5,000 square feet and to condemn six lots of 35,000 square feet total for future dormitory expansion.

The Board meeting continues today on the Portland State College campus.

Foreign Students Attend Seminar

Five University foreign students will leave at 4:30 p.m. today for Marshfield High School in Coos Bay to take part in the annual seminar of international, domestic, and social problems sponsored by the campus YMCA and the Marshfield International Relations Club.

The students, who will return Wednesday evening, include: Ilma Lynton, a music major from Panama; Cecilia Young Do Park, also a music major, from Korea; Stephen Masamichi Sasaki, a political science student from Japan.

Subhash Chandra Jain, graduate student in business administration from India; and Emanuel Kome Epule, a journalism student from the Republic of Cameroon.

Music Students to Perform Own Work

Works written by University students will be performed by students Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the School of Music auditorium.

The student composition recital will include works of vocal; piano; trumpet and trombone; stereo tape; string; and oboe, clarinet, and bassoon music.

The public is invited to attend the program at no charge. Latecomers will not be seated while a performance is in progress.

The IBM interviewer will be on campus February 3

Interview him. How else are you going to find out about new ways to use your talents and skills in an exciting "go-places" career?

You could visit a nearby IBM branch office. You could write to the Manager of College Relations, IBM Corporate Headquarters, Armonk, New York 10504. But we would like to see you on campus. Why not check at your placement office today? See if you can still make an appointment for an on-campus visit with IBM. Then interview the IBM interviewer. Whatever your area of study, ask him how you might use your particular talents at IBM. Ask about your growth potential in America's fastest-growing major industry. You'll never regret it. IBM is an Equal Opportunity Employer.
