PCC Enrollment Rises Winter Term

PORTLAND (AP) — Portland Community College has reversed the winter term registration trend, and added 61 students in the academic division.

Transfers from Portland State, which lost nearly 1,000 from the fall term, were credited with the increase.

Leonard Garmire, community college transfer division administrator, said some of the additions had flunked out of Portland State and some had switched because tuition is about $150 a year less.

He said he doubted that many had transferred because of overcrowding at Portland State. "We are just as crowded as they are."

Portland Community College has 1,790 students in fulltime liberal arts courses and 3,130 students in vocational-technical courses.
