The University of Hawaii Rainbows were hit by a double dose of Duck last night at McArthur Court, losing 82-47.

Not only did the Ducks seriously threaten to double the score on the outmanned Island quintet, but they hit them with

Duck Judo Men In Tourney Win

The U of O Judo Club hosted Oregon State Saturday at McArthur Court in a double elimination tournament.

The Ducks took two first places, two seconds, and one third in the afternoon's competition.

First place in the lightweight division went to Pat O'Kief of the Ducks. The freshman has a first degree brown belt rating.

Second place went to Judo Club captain Stan Yasumoto, a senior, who holds the second degree black belt rating. Yasumoto lost a decision to Gary Motonaga, a first degree black belt, but later in another match threw Motonaga for second place.

Motonaga, of OSU, finished in third place after losing to O'Kief and Yasumoto.

In the heavyweight division, freshman Bill Montgomery of the Ducks, a first degree brown belt, won the meet.

Second place went to another Duck, Jim Sindberg, who is a first degree black belt. Sindberg's only loss in the competition came at the hands of Montgomery.

Third place went to Floyd Black a junior at the University. He made an auspicious debut as an unranked white belt losing only to Montgomery and Sindberg.

Yasumoto and Sindberg were both surprised in the matches by their lower ranking teammates O'Kief and Montgomery who are only brown belts. In judo the highest rank is the black belt.

two squads that scored with equal ease as they ran up their highest point total of the year.

The game was only about 10 minutes old when Webfoot Coach Steve Belko began pulling his regulars. Only Jim Barnett of the starters played as much as half the game.

But it was the eager reserves, led by Kenny Smith and Jim Jones, who proved to be the show-stopper. The reserves unleashed a potent, if sometimes erratic, offense as they ran off a 43-point second half against the inept Rainbow defense.

Hawaii led only once, 2-1, on a short jumper by Bruce O'Neil, a former Roseburg prepper, as the Webfoots opened with their coldest shooting demonstration of the season, missing eight of their first nine shots.

Once Dave Kafoury broke the ice with a driving lay-in, however, the Ducks couldn't miss. Two lay-ins by Kafoury, a pair of jumpers by Bob Craven and Nick Jones, and a Barnett steal shoved the Ducks into a 15-4 lead. After that it was no contest.

The Webfoots continued the mismatch for the entire first half, consistently scoring a brace of fielders for every solo bucket by the Island squad.

The second half was almost a solo show by Jim (Seldom) Jones, the spindly-legged hooper with a real Webfoot waddle. He hit five for 10 from the field and constantly set up teammate Kenny Smith with his quick passes. This duo, with more-than-adequate help from Don DuShane, Mike Nicksic, Bob Craven, and Dave Romppanen, ran the Rainbows off the court. The closest Red Rocha's squad could come in the second half was the 18-point margin that panel started with.

The game even had its humorous moments. Late in the first half, Jim Jones caught Barnett wide open under the basket and the usually-deadly forward blew the shot. The ace scorer, amid hoots from the crowd, turned a shade of red rivaled only by Santa's Noel suit.

Later in the second half, little Mike Nicksic brought the crowd off their chairs with his hustling ball-hawking, only to throw the ball away when he finally reached the front court.

Coach Belko, though obviously pleased with the work of his charges, refused to find fault with the Hawaii squad.

"You've got to admire that type of ball club," he noted. "You can't win a game without ammunition, and they keep going out there night and night."

Red Rocha, the former Oregon State player and assistant coach, didn't make excuses, but did point out that his players were pretty tired after a long tour of the mainland. In addition he mentioned the youth of his squad. "In two or three years Hawaii will have a pretty good ball club," said the lanky Island mentor.

Belko, however, was more interested in the task facing him this weekend when he takes on California and Stanford in the Bay area. "Stanford will come at us with blood in their eyes after those two losses last weekend," he noted. "I'd rather face any other ball club in the PAC than Stanford. They won't shoot 25 per cent for three games in a row."

Commenting on Barnett's missed shot near the end of the first half, Belko said, "Jim (Jones) made a heck of a play. Before the second half began I told him, 'Jim, you go punch that Barnett on the nose.'"

For the game, the Ducks shot a hot-handed 44.7, including a 47.2 second half performance. The Rainbows registered a frigid 25.9. Rebounds favored the victors by an overwhelming 63-32 margin.

The Webfoots placed four players in the double-figure column. Kenny Smith notched 18, while Barnett, Craven, and Jim Jones garnered 12, 11, and 11 respectively. Dick Treglown led Hawaii with 12 counters.

In a preliminary game, the Oregon Frosh defeated the Oregon Law School team, 75-54. Ron Cadorette and Jim Johnson fired in 18 and 17 points respectively to pace the yearlings.

Rocha Heads Lunch Topics

By DAVE BARONTI
Sports Writer

Hula girls, pro basketball, jelly beans, and Oregon State coaches usually aren't discussed at Oregon Club luncheons.

Monday's Oregon Club was different.

The reason (except for the jelly beans) was Red Rocha, guest at the luncheon, and head basketball coach at the University of Hawaii.

Red coached both professionally and at Oregon State before going to Hawaii... hence the hula girls, pro basketball and Beaver coaches.

"I've always been close to Oregon," the former Corvallis sympathizer grinned. "But when I come to Eugene, I feel like the black sheep at a family reunion." "Things are looking better, however. I feel more at home now than I've felt here in years. Really, I never used to feel safe coming to this place."

His experiences with the Oregon-OSU rivalry were nearly always pleasant, however. In fact, he had only complementary superlatives to describe the situation. "There is no better rivalry in the country," he said. "Fierce competition with good sportsmanship—that's been my experience with it."

The business at hand, however, was his basketball team—and he was not overly optimistic.

"We're short and we're slow," he said.

Then, before anyone asked it, he answered a question.

"We're playing this kind of competition mainly because it helps our recruiting program. That's really the first thing an outstanding prospect wants to know... who we're playing. Basketball players, believe it or not, are vain. They want recognition."

"Wait until we get a good team," he cracked. "Everybody will want to play Hawaii—as long as it's an away game."

Oregon coach Steve Belko could not be expected to share Rocha's pseudo-defeatist attitude. And he didn't.

"Hawaii gave Washington a go of it for about fifteen minutes," he testified... "and unless we're at our best, they can beat us. That goes for any team."

The Oregon mentor expressed more concern over the two teams the Ducks meet this weekend—Stanford and California. Stanford, he predicted, will be "mad" after playing two bad games and losing to Arizona and Arizona State.

"They're (Stanford) the same team that beat UCLA," he noted. "Besides, they won't be shooting 25 per cent forever."

He also reaffirmed his view that the present PAC basketball race is a healthy one, predicting that the race will last at least until "Valentines Day."

"Despondent" freshman basketball mentor Jerry Anderson, in his first year coaching at the U of O, was also at the luncheon along with several of his players, whom he introduced.

"We lost all our freshmen from last year's team," he moaned. "This is a rebuilding year."

He does have a few real problems... not the least of which is height. His tallest player is 6-5.

Neither have the traditional "coaching ailments" by-passed him. "You have all heard about coaches problems—heart trouble, ulcers," he told the club. "Well,

I'm here to verify every bit of it."

"One of my principal problems," Anderson concluded, "is that I have a tendency to expect too much of my players."

Bill Bowerman, who spoke next, didn't quite agree.

"I say these boys expect too much of us coaches... and that goes for the parents and athletic directors, too."

One of Bowerman's trackmen—500 yard runner Jere Van Dyke—won his race at the Portland Invitational Track meet over the weekend. "He's coming along," noted the coach.

Swimming coach Don Van Rossen reported the results of his jelly bean experiment over the weekend. The result, he said, was the "tremendous beating" of Washington.

"There were kids who bettered their best previous mark by several seconds," said Van Rossen. "They were really up for the occasion."

Harlem Trotters, Folk Group on Tap

The jesters of basketball, Abe Saperstein's world famous Harlem Globetrotters, display their court skill and comedy Wednesday against the New York Nationals at McArthur Court.

In addition, the Czechoslovakian State Folkloric Dance Troupe, featuring world woman gymnast Eva Bosakova, will perform prior to and at halftime of the Trotter-National game.

The show gets underway at 8 p.m.

Tickets priced at $1 for University of Oregon students will be on sale all day Wednesday at the athletic ticket office on campus.

Viet Nam...

North Viet Nam said, "The resumption of the air strike once again divulged the Johnson peace offensive as a fraud." North Viet Nam leader Ho Chi Minh said he would not negotiate unless the U.S. would recognize that Viet Cong as the only representative of the South Vietnamese people.
