

Senate Adopts Resolution On Academic Freedom

Editor's Note: Last Thursday's ASUO Senate meeting ended well after the Emerald's deadline. What follows is a report on the rest of the business the Senate transacted Thursday.

The ASUO Senate Thursday adopted a three-part resolution on academic freedom and expressed displeasure with a University English instructor who set dress standards for his classes.

The resolution on academic freedom included:

- A general statement on academic freedom with 10 basic points.

- A statement asking that fired faculty members at St. John's University be given "due process."

- A statement asking that the student government at Arizona State University recognize a Students for a Democratic Society chapter attempting to organize on that campus.

The general statement includes the application of academic freedom to limitation on the expression of viewpoints, students' political action groups, freedom of research, the teacher speaking as a citizen, removal of faculty members, loyalty oaths, records kept on students, access to information, and the right to demonstrate.

The part decrying loyalty oaths drew most of the discussion. But Senator-at-large Chuck

Pruitt defended that provision. "I think we'd have a far better University if we had a few Communists on the faculty," he said. "We have to be able to confront these ideas openly."

Marvin Feuerberg, also a senator - at - large, said "I would even recommend that a Communist be hired at the University, one who is really academically qualified."

Larry Beathe disagreed. "I know it's not popular with most of the members of this Senate," he said of his view, "but I'd be hypocritical not to raise it."

Gary Feuerberg said the general statement should have been tabled "because we should think about this issue and devise our own policy rather than use somebody's else's." The motion, introduced by Chairman of Committees Jim Beat was taken from the National Student Association stand on academic freedom.

The second part of Beat's bill on St. John's drew strong opposition from Tom Page, upperclass men's dormitory representative. Page argued that the faculty members at St. John's were fired because they didn't go along with the goals of the Catholic school.

The bill about the English instructor, Maurice Legris, was introduced by Senator-at-large Lee Bollinger. His bill said Legris' ruling that members of his class could not wear jeans or shorts "oversteps the bounds of academic freedom."

Marvin Feuerberg calls Legris' actions "a flagrant violation of student rights." He moved to amend the bill to ask Legris to appear before the Senate and make his views known, but his amendment failed.

A motion to postpone action on the bill until the next meeting also failed.

Pruitt said "It's time we started getting angry with the faculty. We don't have to always be nice to the faculty."

Musicians to Play Modern Jazz At HC Discussion

"Modern Jazz: Is it culture?" is the topic for the Monday night Honors College discussion at 8 p.m. today in the HC Lounge.

There will be a performance by jazz musicians in an effort to demonstrate rather than explain verbally particular moods of contemporary jazz which make it a progressive study and an art form. Members of the student Union Jazz Committee will be present to help with the discussion; anyone interested in attending is welcome.

IFC to Conform on Visiting Rule

The Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) voted Thursday to go along with the Conduct Committee's decision to let women visit men's living groups without chaperones present.

Each fraternity house will set up its own guidelines on visiting hours for coeds, although sorority closing hours will serve as the limits for visiting.

Female visitors will be restricted to the public areas of houses, such as living rooms, dining rooms, and dens.

IFC also voted to drop the rule which in the past has placed on social probation any house with a grade average .1 below the all-mens' grade average.

The rule was dropped, according to IFC President Roger Qualman, because there has been no relationship between social activity on the group level and poor grades of students in the groups.

Tribunal chairman Andy Jordan discussed a proposed joint committee which will be formed by the Panhellenic Judiciary Board and the IFC Tribunal. The committee will review problems between fraternities and sororities.

Plans are now being formulated for the formation of this joint committee.

Other business consisted of a discussion of the plans for the annual IFC Banquet, to be held on March 3.
