

Group to Present African Drama

"Cry, The Beloved Country," a drama adapted from the book by Alan Paton, will be presented at 8 p.m. today in the Student Union Ballroom by the Bishop's Company, American Repertory Players.

The production will be given as a University Assembly program and is open to the public at no charge.

The drama was adapted by Phyllis Beardsley Bokar, founder-producer of The Bishop's Company. The hero of the story is an old and humble Zulu parson from the high hills of Africa, who sets out for Johannesburg in search of his only son. He finds the boy in prison, the murderer of a white man who had devoted his life to justice for the black race.

The Bishop's Company a unique organization dedicated to the idea of reuniting the forces of religion and the theatre, was founded in California in 1952. It has traveled across the United States and Canada taking theatrical production to churches, educational institutions, and organizations.

Historian to Speak On Enlightenment

Roland Mortier of the University of Brussels, a noted authority on European literary and intellectual history of the 17th and 18th centuries, will speak at 4 p.m. today in 123 Science.

His lecture, on "The Enlightenment: Evolution of a Word and a Concept," is open to the public.

Mortier is a visiting professor of French at Stanford University this year. He is the author of four books and numerous articles, ranging from specialized studies on Pascal and others, to general interpretations of the Age of Enlightenment.

Mortier's visit to the University is sponsored by the departments of history and romance languages.

Pruitt...

(Continued from page 6) es, nor should the rules be so discriminatory as to not allow women the same rights as men concerning closing hours. The dry zone should be lifted, and the University should stop pretending that such measures are really effective or appropriate.

The Senate has decided that it wants the campus as a whole to be publicly debated and ponder the Viet Nam situation.

If our students responsibly voiced their opinions, perhaps a reaction would begin and the American people as a whole would wake up, and President Johnson would have to cease giving us simple black and white explanations that we are in Asia to save democracy against communist aggression.

It just isn't that simple, and the administration should behave as if the American people are mature enough to know the real reasons why we are there.

All that I am asking as an elected representative of yours is that we all become more aware of the forces which govern our lives. The University and world situation should not be accepted at just face value.

There are changes which must be made, but as long as students remain more interested in watching basketball games than in improving the quality of the education we are offered, we shall remain in slavery to the people who do care, and who are making the decisions for us.

I will not try to list all the ways in which you can express your concern, for it is about time that the students started thinking about possible solutions.

I shall suggest, however, that an active student body and Senate could build such a fire under the administration of this University that we could make every change we wanted.

VISTA Recruiting Movie Previewed

"The Hard Way," to be shown at 8:30 today in the Student Union by VISTA recruiters, is an ugly movie. It is full of the crummy sights and sounds that are the world of America's new poor.

The new poor, as the movie stresses, are not much different than the hopeful immigrant kids of a generation ago.

Fat from starches, apathetic in public housing that looks like cement cupboards, the new poor are hopeless losers always just outside the mainstream of American life.

The entire film presents a mood of "quiet desperation" aided by slow jazz background music.

There are some moments of sharp poignancy in the movie, such as a teenage boy fighting back tears as he struggles with a first grade reader; a slum youngster trying to understand such concepts as "sail boat," "briefcase," and "brunch."

The movie's message is simply that it is wrong to impose middle class values like "brunch" on the poor.

unique set of standards upon which we must build." Family loyalty was cited as one of the good mores of the poor. In this, area the middle class could learn from them. VISTAs try to give the poor the incentive to work within their own environment. "We want to encourage diversity not preach the sermon of 'Ticky-Tacky'."

"No training would really be good enough," said Koch. "VISTAs are constantly confronted by situations they never dreamed of—some real horror stories. Although muscle and initiative help, versatility is what really counts. VISTAs are now working in such diverse places as Florida, with refugees, and north of Nome with Eskimos. "If we can just make some formerly unaware people realize that equality of opportunity does not exist in America, VISTA Week will be a success," Koch declared.

Hoyt Talk...

"If we tolerate graft and corruption in our backyard, we are responsible for it in Washington, D.C. We must first denounce it at home if we expect to effectively denounce it there," said Hoyt about the social and moral responsibilities of a newspaper.

Hoyt compared a paper to a mirror. "A realistic and effective newspaper is like a mirror. It should reflect the public life in a broad sense." But the reflection must be accurate, he continued. "A distorted newspaper is no more useful than a distorted mirror."

"A man who wants a challenge and has drive and ambition" is the way Hoyt described the kind of reporter he likes to get on the Post. They must want to do something worthwhile and take pride in it, he continued. "Motivation is important. School performance alone is not a significant factor."

As the Eric Allen Memorial Lecturer, Hoyt reminisced about the journalist. "He taught us to be true to ourselves." Allen was a friendly, out-going man, with "faith in newspapers and a desire to improve them," he continued.

"He kindled in us that spirit of duty and fulfillment which is part of being a newspaper man," Hoyt concluded.

Straub to Speak In Pollution Series

State Treasurer Robert Straub is scheduled to speak at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday for the series of pollution programs being held this month at the University.

"Pollution Abatement—A Public Official's Duty" is the topic of Straub's speech in the Student Union Dads' Room.

In his discussion, Straub will outline his ideas on the responsibilities and capabilities of a public official in efforts to reduce pollution.

The former Eugene-Springfield area rancher and businessman has been interested in the growing pollution problems of the state. He has been active in programs of pollution abatement both as a private citizen and public official.
