The Science addition is higher on the proposed priority list than the administration building. If Science is approved and administration is not, this will create a problem.

Lallas said in that case the addition would have to go to the northeast of the present Science complex. He appointed a subcommittee to look into the timing conflict and discuss possible solutions.

Two other projects on that list also will probably get top priority.

One is a new set of three uncovered and three covered tennis courts and nine indoor handball courts. They will probably cost about $225,000.

The other is a central cooling system for major buildings. Estimated cost: $240,000. This will probably be included in plans for the new Science buildings, according to Lallas.

Other projects on the list are a warehouse and service buildings for the Physical Plant; an addition to Lawrence Hall, the architecture building; a law school addition and legal center; an addition to the music building; another part of the behavioral science complex, for which the first section will be built this biennium; an addition to the education building; a fourth addition to the Science building; an addition to the Museum of Natural History; three proposed "satellite" Student Unions; a 200-unit married student housing project; a swimming pool; and dormitories for the marine biology center at Charleston.

Ellickson to Discuss Role of Athletics

The second Oregon Assembly will begin at 4 p.m. today with a keynote address by Raymond Ellickson, professor of physics and member of the Faculty Committee on Inter-Collegiate Athletics.

The topic will be "The Role of Inter-Collegiate Athletics."

The Oregon Assembly is sponsored by the Student Union Forum Committee to bring about better communication between faculty and students in issues of mutual concern for both the University and the community.

Cutler to Discuss Meaning in Godot

Jean Cutler, director of "Waiting For Godot" now playing at the University Theatre, will be at Wesley Foundation, 1236 Kincaid, Saturday following the performance of the play. Members of the cast will join Cutler in discussing implications of the play.

Discussion leaders will be the Rev. Robert Kingsbury. Students from various religious centers have been invited to question the play's theological point of view.

"Godot" is one of the first attempts by Samuel Beckett at avant-garde theater.
