

Migrant Labor Recruit Drive Starts Today

Recruitment for the 1966 Migrant Labor Project will begin today with the distribution of a printed four-page supplement about the project. The deadline for applications, however, has been extended to April 1, instead of the Monday deadline as given in the supplement.

The original distribution date was scheduled for February 10, but, due to extenuating circumstances, distribution and recruiting was postponed at that time.

Applications are available in the Project office, 305 SU, from 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Personal interviews of the applicants will begin on April 5, and the final selection will be announced by April 25.

The Project's steering committee is presently working with the county health officers from the major migrant centers in Oregon to determine the specific nature of the 1966 Project. Tentatively, the Project is designed to place students in the field under the supervision of a Project director and the local health officers.

Through Project work, opportunities are available for students to apply theory in practice, to learn about a culture foreign to their own, and to demonstrate their abilities to develop initiative.

In the past two years of the Project these opportunities were open only in the field of health, which was interpreted liberally by students and conservatively by the health officers. The 1966 Project, however, may offer a chance for research work on migrant health problems, as well as working directly with the health aspect.

A training class offering regular University credit is being planned for spring term. The course will probably include a basic outline on the poverty problem as well as the dynamics of migrant culture. Possible credits may also be offered through the summer work.

Further information about migrants, the Project, or the spring term class can be obtained by calling ext. 1855.

For Spring Term

Court Suspends Frosh Prankster

By JAGI THOMPSON
Staff Writer

Sanctions of suspension and disciplinary probation were handed down by Student Court in two separate hearings Monday.

A second-term freshman was found guilty of two violations of the Student Conduct Code—Section I.B.3.a and Section I.B.3.b.

In the first instance the defendant had been found pouring rum into a cup of punch at a dorm dessert.

In the second instance the defendant was charged with throwing a balloon containing butyric acid through a window in Sheldon Hall, a women's dorm in the Earl complex.

Linda Anderson, secretary of Student Prosecutor Greg Reed, described butyric acid as smelling like "strong perspiration and rotten eggs," and added that this odor lingers for "about two days."

The defendant pleaded guilty to both charges. The defendant was on disciplinary probation for academic cheating at the time the violations occurred, which was this term.

The Court decided to suspend the student from the University spring term. The student is still eligible for night school and summer school.

In the other hearing a senior I.B.2.a of the Code. The charge was that Jan. 21 the defendant was, that Jan. 21 the defendant cheated on a physical science survey exam by taking three answers from an alternate form.

The Court sanctioned the defendant to disciplinary probation for the remainder of time he is at the University, which will be through the summer quarter.

The Court also recommended that the defendant ask his instructor, Raymond Ellickson, professor of physics, to permit him to take a different exam covering the same material as a means of redemption.

For April Show

International Festival Ticket Sales to Begin This Month

Mail order tickets for the third annual international Festival at the University April 13-17 will go on sale March 1.

General ticket sales for the cultural show will begin March 16.

International students from other west coast universities will join 600 international students at the University representing 90 countries to present one of the "largest shows of its type ever staged in the United States."

Two entirely different performances with exotic acts depicting cultures from around the world will come to life on four stages at 7:30 p.m., April 15 and 16 in McArthur Court.

Tickets for the evening performances will be $1 each for adults and $1 each for children 12 and under. A special children's matinee will be given at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 16. Price for all seats will be 50 cents.

Obtain Tickets

Group or individual tickets may be obtained by writing to International Festival, University of Oregon, Box 5272, Eugene, Ore. 97405. Checks to the exact amount should be made out to the International Festival.

The International Festival will open Wednesday, April 13, with an exhibition and bazaar that will run through the duration of the week.

The free exhibition housed in the SU and the Art Museum will feature booths and displays with art, literature, architects, costumes and crafts from every part of the globe. The exhibition also includes space and communications displays showing man's effort to extend communication and the role of science in the space age.

Expanded Bazaar

The greatly expanded bazaar will give those who attend an opportunity to shop for knick-knacks, souvenirs and candy from around the world. Last year the bazaar sold out completely in less than 24 hours.

All proceeds from the Festival go toward international student scholarships and other international projects.

The Festival is being sponsored by the campus YM-YWCA in co-operation with the University and its various departments, the Eugene, Springfield, West Lane, Cottage Grove and Junction City Chambers of Commerce; area businesses and civic organizations; foreign embassies; and international students studying at west coast universities.

More information on the Festival can be obtained by calling 343-1221.

YMCA Dialogue To Debate Conduct, Hours

Bob Carl and Pam Bladine, both members of the University Conduct Committee, will debate University closing hours, visiting hours, and student conduct today in a Y Dialogue at 4 p.m. in the SU Bottom of the Bowl.

The following questions will be examined during the debate:

- Has the original philosophy of the Conduct Code been lost during the first three years of its application?

- Should the University inform parents of students charged by civil (downtown) officials of their offenses?

- Could closing hours be further relaxed?

- Should the double standards in closing hours be eliminated?

- What visiting hours are possible at the University?

Francis B. Nickerson, associate dean of students, was invited to participate in the dialogue, but refused. Nickerson said he felt that he should not participate because he was an administrator of the Code, and not a member of the committee.

Phi Kappa Psi Elects

Phi Kappa Psi fraternity held elections recently.

INTERVIEWS for:

Sales and Sales Management Training Program

This Program is designed to develop young men for careers in life insurance sales and sales management. It provides an initial training period of 3 months (including 2 weeks at a Home Office School) before the men move into full sales work.

Those trainees who are interested in and who are found qualified for management responsibility are assured of ample opportunity to move on to such work in either our field offices or in the Home Office after an initial period in sales.

The Connecticut Mutual is a 119-year-old company with 580,000 policyholder-members and over six billion dollars of life insurance in force. Aggressive expansion plans provide unusual opportunities for the men accepted.

Staffer Wins Writing Award

Phil Semas, associate editor of the Emerald, has won a $100 prize in editorial writing in competition with other college journalists across the nation.

Semas' editorial arguing for open faculty meetings, run in the Dec. 3, 1965 Emerald, placed 10th in the country in a contest sponsored by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation. Student journalists from 48 colleges and universities competed for the awards.

The University School of Journalism will receive a matching grant of $100.

This is the first cash award the University has received from the Hearst competition this year. Two Emerald staff members won cash awards last year.

The Hearst Foundation sponsors seven monthly contests each school year in various categories of journalism.
