

JERRY DAVIDSON
10 Years with Emerald

ODE Printer Here 10 Years

"There used to be just two of us down here at night to put out the Emerald," remembers University Press Night Foreman Jerry Davidson. "We'd do as much as we could and then the day crew would come in and finish up the next day and the paper got out whenever they could finish up."

Jerry Davidson joined University press as night foreman on April 1, 1956. Today he celebrates his 10th anniversary as "downstairs editor" of the Emerald. He's the man who runs the printing operation that puts out the newspaper, the man in charge of putting ads together and the news in the paper. It's a much bigger operation now than when he and that one typesetter put out the paper.

He has three or four men working under him most of the time.

His job is more than just doing the mechanical work. He works closely with editors and the advertising department to help them save money and make the Emerald's narrowly balanced budget work.

Content isn't his main worry, though he did stop a libelous editorial once and once reminded an editor that he couldn't endorse candidates on election day.

"If they want to print it," he told Old Oregon, the University alumni magazine, "We'll put it in."

Many editors and business managers have relied heavily on Jerry Davidson for advice and gets along well with most of them. "There were only a couple I didn't like," he says.

48 Representatives at Counselors Confab

Counselors and vice principals from 48 Oregon high schools are scheduled to attend the annual High School Counselor Conference at the University Saturday. The conference is designed to provide high school counselors with information about the University and with information about the effectiveness of high school counseling programs.

University students will have the opportunity to meet with former counselors between 9:30 and noon in the SU Ballroom. Counselors, in talking with University students who are graduates of their high schools, will be looking for ways to improve counseling programs.

The following high schools will be represented at the conference: Albany Union, Bend Senior, Beaverton, Canby Union, Crater, Cleveland, Cottage Grove, Centennial, Corvallis Senior, Franklin, Gresham, Hillsboro, Hood River, Jefferson, Klamath Union,

Other schools with representatives at the conference will be: Sheldon, Sherman, Siuslaw, South

Salem, St. Helens, Sunset, Yoncalla, The Dalles, Sandy Union, Clackamas, David Douglas, South Eugene, Astoria, Tillamook, Wilson, and Roseburg.

New curricula at the University will be explained Saturday afternoon by Charles T. Duncan, associate dean of faculties. Also included in the afternoon session will be a discussion of summer pre-freshman advising, headed by Phil Schoggen, director of academic advising at the University.

The conference will conclude with an open discussion of the days events.
