

Bill Tabled...

But Henry Drummonds, also a senator-at-large, said he felt that the Senate wasn't informed well enough that it could make a decision yet.

"Don't Know"
"This thing is something most senators don't know enough about. I don't think we're ready to work yet," he said.

Chuck Pruitt spoke for the bill: "What we're really talking about is the basic concept of the Senate, about whether we're really ready to assert ourselves."

"The Senate should be the most powerful group on campus," he continued. "By letting this bill ride, we're not in a good bargaining position."

"I'd like to see us placed in a position of making decisions on this campus—I'd like to place them (the Board) in a position where they never could make a decision."

Drummonds moved that the bill be tabled, arguing that "Other groups are interested. If you want to be a representative body," he told the others, "you must involve everybody." He said that the University SDS has boycotted the Board's hearings this week, and he asked for a delay, in order that that group could be heard, as well as others who had something to say.

The Senate had to vote four times in order to decide what to do with the motion.

The first question, as to whether to vote on the motion, failed by one vote to gain the necessary two-thirds majority.

Drummond's motion to table the bill failed to get a majority. A third motion, to vote on the bill, also failed to get the majority.

Second Motion

Finally, Skip Clemens made a second motion to lay the bill aside. This one made it 14 to 11, no abstentions.

At that point, more than half the senators present left the meeting, heading for the Don Duncan speech in the SU ballroom, upstairs.

Drummonds said after the meeting that he was very concerned about the communication problem in the solution of the controversy. "Most of these people knew about this bill for only 15 minutes," he said. "And most of them don't know enough about what the Board's been doing to really discuss the issue."

He admitted, however, that those senators should have known more about the issue.

Semas, co-author of the bill, was gloomy about its rejection: "I am sorry to find out that senators are so unaware of one of the major issues of the year on this campus, and so afraid of asking for authority. I am also sorry that some senators are putting political ambitions ahead of the students' interests," he added.

"If the senate is ever going to be effective on this campus, it must stop cowering in a corner and assert itself."

In earlier action, the Senate heard another bill introduced by Beat, a resolution that the University should continue its membership in the U.S. National Students Association (NSA).

"The YAF's (University Young Americans for Freedom) have started their annual spring campaign to get the University out of the NSA," Beat remarked. "I thought that we could save them the trouble of collecting all those names for a referendum."

NSA

The question of putting the NSA question on a general election ballot this spring then arose. Tom Paige said he favored putting the question on the ballot. "It'll give us a chance to find out how the students feel about it. It'll give us a definite decision to refer to."

Semas answered Paige: "You have a definite position—it (NSA) was voted in three years ago. How many decisions do you need?"

The resolution was passed, 22 to 6, no abstentions.

In other business the Senate:

- Heard a report from Chuck Pruitt that the Senate's recommendation for an investigation of living organizations to unearth racial discrimination had been taken to President Flemming. Pruitt said that no action has been taken on the recommendation, but that Flemming and Oregon State University President James Jensen may set up a joint committee to look into the problem.

"They'll probably have to, being with the Sigma Chi's," Pruitt said, "because of their national policy on discrimination."

ASUO Vice-President Tom Clark said that Flemming was "in total support of the recommendation, but that it was unclear who would initiate the actual proceedings."

Clark said that the President's office was not willing to undertake an investigation of University living organizations.

- Unanimously passed a bill presented by Scott Farleigh for the Campus Planning Committee asserting that "current recreational facilities (at the University) are grossly inadequate," and recommending that plans for recreational development be placed on all budget priority lists.

Farleigh said that the current state budget for recreation in the system of higher education—$45,000—is less than 3 per cent of the total budget.

Present plans for the construction of another swimming pool, a rugby field, and tennis courts, will not be implemented until 1969. The committee wants the new recreational facilities included—along with class rooms and research facilities—in all long-range planning for the University.

- Received a list of Eugene gas stations now offering student discounts under Lee Bollinger's new program. They are: Signal Gas, 1811 Franklin Blvd.; Hancock Gas, 19th and Agate; Pride of Oregon, Broadway and Alder; and American Gas, on Franklin Blvd., across from Agate.

Grape Workers Offered Vote

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Big Di Giorgio Corp. proposed Thursday that its vineyard workers decide in an election whether they want to be represented by the Farm Workers Union now staging a 300-mile protest march to the state capital.

The union struck Di Giorgio and other growers seven months ago, demanding recognition.

Reacting to Thursday's proposal, a union spokesman declared that a vote by the more than 1,000 workers now employed at Di Giorgio's two Delano area grape-growing properties would give the choice to strikebreakers.

Di Giorgio's proposal came one day after Schenley Industries announced recognition of the independent National Farm Workers Association as bargaining agent for its vineyard workers. This was the first such recognition of the NFWA by any employer.

Di Giorgio is the biggest and Schenley the second largest employer in the rich grape-growing district in Kern and Tulare counties at the south end of California's San Joaquin valley.

Robert Di Giorgio, president of the fruit and food processing firm, detailed the election and bargaining proposal at a news conference in San Francisco. NFWA representatives attended as observers.

Jack Ybarra, NFWA field representative, said later that an election among the pickers he termed strikebreakers working for Di Giorgio "would seem out of place."

Ybarra said the union's official reaction would come from Cesar Chavez, Mexican-born NFWA chief now on a march between Stockton and Sacramento. He said Chavez had not yet received Di Giorgio's letter.

on an issue. If they do express themselves, they are laying themselves open to criticism and possible ridicule."

Returning to the "Playboy issue," Casey said that he opposed the sale of the magazine because he feels "that there are fewer 'men' who are contributing to society and that the magazine serves no purpose except pushing, enhancing and encouraging a philosophy which says it is all right to engage in any type of activity as long as it doesn't injure another human being."

Casey said that he isn't against "sex per se, but I feel that it belongs in a certain context—mainly marriage."

He said that since the issue was made public, he has received one to two hundred letters—and only that one person opposed his position. He said the letters were from many people—everything from seven-year-old boys to parents, grandparents, and godparents.

He said that he had thought—"maybe I was naive about the issue"—that the motion would pass. "I thought it would merely be brought up, discussed and passed," he said, "but there was a lot of opposition to the motion within the Board."

In other business:

The Board set the time of the Co-op's annual meeting as 7 p.m., April 21, and urged all Co-op members to attend because the proposed new by-laws will be discussed at the meeting.

- Authorized the Co-op manager to borrow up to $75,000 for working capital. Until this time the manager was authorized to borrow up to $25,000 each at two different banks.

- Approved the installation of a coin-operated Xerox duplicating machine in the basement of the new addition.

Scheer Receives Research Grant

Bradley T. Scheer, professor of biology at the University, has been awarded a grant for research by the U.S. Public Health Service to continue his investigations into the hormonal control of the salt and water balance in frogs.

The research has general significance for terrestrial mammals, including man. One part of the research has been aimed at finding out how the frog turns the regulatory mechanisms in its skin, bladder, and kidneys off and on when it moves from water to land.

One of the chief contributions of the research has been confirmation that the adrenal glands are involved in this regulatory process.

The PHS grant for 1966 totals $35,152. This represents the seventh year of PHS support for the project and further support through 1970 has been pledged.
