

International Festival Opens Today

Sue Pack, Miss Oregon, will be on hand to open the Third Annual International Festival at 9 a.m. today in the Student Union.

The exhibition and bazaar will be open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. today and Thursday, until midnight Friday and Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Spanish jewelry, Mexican abalone shellings, German and Swiss chocolate bars, and Hungarian magnetic chess sets are only a few of the many items which will be on sale at the bazaar.

Since last year's bazaar was sold out within 24 hours, foreign students have expanded this year's selection of imported art work, souvenirs, and candy.

Shriver Coming

R. Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity and former Peace Corps director, will arrive on campus Friday for the Festival. Shriver also intends to visit the University's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point.

Zenon Rossides, ambassador to the United States and United Nations from Cyprus, will also be at the University for the five-day event.

Representing more than 90 foreign countries, the Festival is billed as the "largest cultural extravaganza" in the Pacific Northwest. Three years ago, however, University administrators were skeptical about the project and gave only mild support.

Sold Out

Four hundred persons had to be turned away from the first International Festival in 1964. Since then, the Festival has received commendation from President Johnson, U.N. Secretary General U Thant, and more than 100 foreign embassies. The United States Information Agency has sent printed material overseas on the Festival, and portions of the 1965 Festival were aired over the Voice of America.

This year's Festival will have 600 participants from seven western colleges and universities, and about 500 students from the University.

Festival events will include an exhibition at the University Museum of Art, and three performances of a cultural show featuring troupes of foreign students, including the Hadarim, an Israeli Student Organization dance troupe from UCLA.

Governor Mark Hatfield and many Oregon mayors have proclaimed this week International Festival Week.

The cultural shows will begin at 7:30 p.m. both Friday and Saturday at McArthur Court. A special children's show has been slated for 10 a.m. Saturday.

The two evening shows will be different; visiting students will join with University foreign students to present 22 acts depicting areas of their cultures.

Props Imported

Costumes, props, and other needed equipment have been imported for the Festival.

Cost for the evening performances will be $1.50 for adults, $1 for children under 12; tickets for Saturday morning's children's show will be 50 cents for everybody. Tickets are on sale at the SU main desk.

Free travelogues from 20 countries will be shown continuously all day Saturday, and international meals will be served in the SU throughout the five-day Festival.

The International Festival is sponsored by the campus YM-YWCA in conjunction with the Eugene Chamber of Commerce, Lane County merchants, and service clubs.

Family Finance Workshop Slated to Help Educators

A workshop designed to help educators furnish young people with foundations for building sound habits in dealing with their personal financial problems will be held at the University this summer from June 20 to July 15.

The four-week Family Finance Education Workshop is planned for a variety of persons—high school teachers of social studies, mathematics, business, and home-making, elementary school teachers, school administrators, curriculum specialists, guidance counselors, principals and supervisors, and junior college teachers.

Forty $100 scholarships will be given workshop participants. The scholarships will cover books, materials, and tuition charges. Awards will be made on the basis of information given in the application form, scholastic and professional records, interest, and the recommendation of the applicant's school administrator.

Early applications will receive priority.

Sponsored by the Schools of Education and Business Administration of the University, in cooperation with the National Committee for Education in Family Finance and the Institute of Life Insurance, the workshop is directed by Hugh Wood, professor of education at the University.

Participants will have an opportunity to develop leadership in skills and in group processes, prepare teaching units, accumulate and evaluate instructional materials, develop curriculum plans, and share experiences with outstanding leaders in family finance from business and the University staff.

John W. Soha, associate professor of accounting at the University, will join Wood on the regular workshop staff.

The workshop will meet approximately six hours daily, Monday through Friday, with morning sessions devoted to lectures and discussions, and afternoon sessions affording opportunities for curriculum sessions, small group discussions and other activities as needed by the group.

Six graduate credits will be granted for work satisfactorily completed in the four-week session.

Applications for scholarships must be submitted no later than April 20. Persons wishing to apply for a scholarship should write to FFE Workshop Director, School of Education, at the University.

chapter does not discriminate.

However, a former president of the Sigma Chi national, who left office last fall, admonished the local chapters not to pledge Negroes. In its 110-year history Sigma Chi, which has a strong historical base in the South, has never pledged a Negro.

John Hanson, advisor to fraternities at Stanford, who formerly held a similar position here, said that he had received no official word from the national.

However, he said Stanford is "happy" the Sigma Chi chapter has been reinstated and that Stanford would recognize them as a member of a national fraternity. "We have always been supportive of the local chapter," he pointed out.

He said Stanford had had no communication from the Sigma Chi national all year.

Draft . . .

but a person must stand ready to face the consequences of disobeying the law.

Berremann pointed to the recent stand of the Ecumenical Council asserting the immorality of war. He predicted that the 60 million Roman Catholics in the United States would take the new statement seriously and present possible trouble for the present administration.

Barclay, on the other hand, opposed the selective service on the grounds that it was an authoritarian system that did not comply with the "spirit of inquiry and doubt."

He continued by answering a question from the crowd saying he had been a conscientious objector in the 1940's and, were he eligible, he would take the same stand today. He concluded by saying, "war is morally wrong." "It is a symptom of a deeper illness found in the social system."

Clyde DeBerry, a graduate in political science, backed up Goldrich's argument that there should be a peaceful draft—a choice for the individual.

John Howard, professor of sociology, took a slightly different stand, pointing to the inefficiency of selective service and said that only five per cent of all eligible men were drafted and that they were usually of the socially or economically deprived classes.

The discussions will be continued at 8 p.m. today in room 3 of Fenton Hall. The speakers will be Professors John Howard and Harold Barclay, president-elect of Portland State College; Joe Uris, and an ACLU lawyer.

Problems concerning legal and technical aspects of the draft as they relate to conscientious objectors will be the focus.

Professor Returns

Sanford S. Tepfer, associate professor of biology at the University, has returned from a panel meeting for the Commission on Undergraduate Education in the Biological Sciences held recently in Washington, D.C.

The commission is one of several in a National Science Foundation program to investigate the problems of college level social science education.

Tepfer is a member of the panel on instructor personnel for college biology courses.

Wegelin Publishes

How the American girl symbolized the promise of unencumbered American vitality for a great novelist is told by a University English professor, Christof Wegelin, in an essay published in the recent book Critical Approaches to American Literature.

Wegelin's essay "The American as a Young Lady" was taken from his book, The Image of Europe in Henry James.

West Point Rejects Girl From Oregon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Military Academy at West Point is still an all-male school. Cathy Christie of Ashland, the third choice nominee of Rep. Robert B. Duncan (D-Ore.) for admission to the academy June 1, didn't make it.

The Army advised Duncan that his first choice nominee, Charles Pyle of Eugene, was found "fully qualified and entitled to admission."

Duncan had nominated Pyle, with Joseph Ward of Coos Bay, as first alternate, and Cathy Christie as second alternate, on the basis of a competitive examination.

The Army returned the Cathy Christie nomination with the explanation that the primary purpose of the military academy is to train men for combat duty. Duncan was invited to submit another name, but declined to do so.

The Congressman said he found nothing in the regulations that barred a qualified girl from attending the military academy.

He said Tuesday that he will nominate a girl again if he finds one qualified.
