

Danish School Model For Vacation College

A Danish-style educational experience called "Vacation College" will be offered at the University for the third time this summer. The unique adult education program with no requirements, no grades, and no credits is set for August 14-21.

Miss Grace Graham, professor of education, is director of Vacation College. She founded the session at the University, which is modeled after Danish "folk schools" which feature teachers and students living together in small colleges for vacation periods.

Designed for both college graduates who would like to return to campus and persons who have not attended college, Vacation College offers lectures of contemporary interest followed by general discussions.

For the first time, two separate study programs are scheduled this year: "Youth and Age in Modern America" and "Understanding Contemporary America."

Participants spend three hours each morning in classes taught by University professors and have afternoons free for recreational activities and discussions. Discussion groups or cultural activities are planned for the evening.

Vacation College students may choose to live in one of the University's dormitories, or may live elsewhere and join the group for lunches and dinners in the dormitory.

Faculty members of Vacation College are Frederick R. Fosmire, professor of psychology and director of the University's Clinical Training Program; James R. Klonoski, associate professor of political science; Robert L. Peterson, assistant professor of history; and Miss Graham. Lecturers from various other academic disciplines are also slated.

The $120 fee covers all expenses, including board and room, tuition, Health Service, tickets to the Carnival Theatre, and other entertainment, plus the costs of all sports. Persons who do not room and eat breakfast in the dormitory pay $83.

Enrollment in Vacation College is limited. Interested persons should contact Grace Graham, Director, Vacation College at the University.

War Censorship Topic of Contest

"Wartime Censorship in a Free Society" is the topic of an essay contest in which full-time University students may compete for a $50 Bennett prize.

Bennett prizes were established at 25 colleges and universities in 1905 under terms of the will of Philo Sherman Bennett, a New Haven, Conn., attorney. Bennett's bequest provided these schools with funds for an annual prize for the best essay on the principles of free government.

Manuscripts may deal with any phase of the topic and be analytical, historical or philosophical in approach.

They must be deposited at the English Composition Office, 118 Prince Lucian Campbell Hall, by Monday, May 16. The essays must be under 3,000 words in length, and be typewritten and double spaced.

The author's name should not appear on the manuscript, but be written with his address on a slip of paper attached to the manuscript in a plain, sealed envelope. No manuscripts will be returned.

The winning essay will be submitted to the editor of the Northwest Review for possible publication, and the winner notified by mail. No prize will be awarded if no manuscript is of high merit.

Further information about the contest may be obtained from members of the Committee for the Bennett Prize.

Skull and Dagger Accepts Petitions

Skull and Dagger, sophomore men's honorary, is accepting petitions from sophomore men who wish to be considered for membership.

Qualifications include the following: the candidate must be a male student at the University who has third term freshman standing or sophomore standing. A candidate for membership must have a 2.5 accumulative GPA with a minimum of 2.0 for spring term.

Criteria for membership: candidates will be judged on character, scholarship, leadership, student activities, and service to the University. The criteria being judged must be from the candidate's freshman record only. No more than three men are eligible from a single living organization.

Petitions are available on the third floor of the Student Union and must be returned to the proper box, also on the third floor of the SU, by 5 p.m., April 22.
