

Activities Budget Up . . .

case and not in the other," Leister said.

A. L. "Si" Ellingson, director of the Student Union, objected to the fact that the Oregana was not intending to be self-supporting next year.

"In the past," he said, "we have always expected it to at least break even. If it doesn't, all the students will be subsidizing those who buy the annual."

Reduce Increases

Jones, discussing possible actions if the Publications Board didn't receive the amount requested, suggested that salary increases might be reduced, that the Emerald print fewer issues or that it might print fewer copies per press run.

Burt Benson, director of student publications, told the Board that next year the Emeralds that are distributed to faculty and staff will possibly be paid for out of the general University budget rather than from student fees.

Phil Semas, Emerald Editor, said the other alternative to Benson's suggestion would be to stop delivery of Emeralds to faculty and staff, which costs $5,665 for printing.

Increasing administration costs and new programs brought the proposed increase in the Student Union budget.

Administration cost would represent an increase of over $6,000, and the total increase asked by both the Student Union and its Recreational Council would be an increase of about $23,000 over last year.

Dick Lawrence, chairman of the Student Union Board, said the SU wanted to hire a new group of salaried officers and a full-time civil service secretary. Lawrence said the increases in student salaries was being asked because of the increase in programming by the Student Union, requiring more time and effort on the part of the students, and because of the fact that school costs are increasing and "... a student who is working in the SU could be earning money on a job outside the University."

More Than Pastime

Lawrence added that those working in the SU are doing it as more than an extra-curricular pastime. He said most of them are going to be professionals in this field.

Another hike in the SU budget, around $5,000, would be in a proposed jazz appreciation program which would involve bringing to campus big-name jazz players.

The SU Forum, which would sponsor an "awareness series" and co-sponsor special events such as the Duncan speech, would show an increase of $3,600.

Recreation Council

The Recreation Council asked for a total increase of a little over $1,000.

Lawrence asked for a summer session SU Board increase. "With the undergraduate enrollment for summer session expected to go up considerably, we feel we need to increase the amount spent on programs for the summer session, since undergraduates avail themselves more of our programs."

Lawrence also suggested that the Budget Board recommend to the next budget board that three transfers be made:

- That the civil service secretary planned for the SU Board office next year could be financed by the general University budget;

- That the programs of the Recreation Council get an increased subsidy, perhaps to the tune of $10,000 (whereas the present subsidy is $3,000);

- And that the summer session program get a subsidy from the general University budget.

Before the meeting ended, Phil Semas asked if the Budget Board would consider opening its final meeting, in which the budget is to be decided upon, to the press. Jones said in the past this meeting has always been closed, but that the Board would consider the request.

Job Corps Debate . . .

Olds denied this and said work in the center can lead to a degree that is equivalent to a high school diploma.

Will Go On

Several of the Corpsmen present said they planned to go on to college.

Olds added that "garbage collectors and mechanics are important to society, too. Try going without the services of a garbage collector for a couple of weeks."

Charles Thomas, a member of the Tongue Point faculty, said the program has less impact on students than on the staff.

"People lose jobs, not because of a lack of vocational skills, but because of not being able to get along with people," he said. The center teaches the boys how to conduct themselves in interviews, how to dress for interviews, and how to develop good attitudes, Thomas added.

Awards Dessert Will Honor 15

A dessert for the presentation of awards to 15 Eugene groups and individuals for their contribution to international understanding is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. today.

The dessert has been planned by the Mayor's Committee for International Co-operation Year and will be held at the Central Lane YM-YWCA.

The Mayor's Committee, which selected those being honored, was formed in conjunction with the International Co-operation Year, proclaimed by President Johnson last year.

To Be Honored

Members of the University community included in the presentation are John Gange, director of the University Institute for International Studies; Robert Ghent, University Foreign Student Adviser; Anant Chavan, director of the International Festival; Mrs. Carl Webb, chairman of the Friendship Family Foundation; and Mrs. Robert Kingsbury, for work with international students through Wesley Foundation.

Groups to be honored include the student body of Willamette High School, for their Mexican Exchange Program, the South Eugene High School International Relations Club, the Foreign Student Friendship Family Foundation, the University YM-YWCA, and the University Cosmopolitan Club.

Winter to Speak

Chief speaker for the evening will be Willem H. Winter, chairman.

SALESMEN:

When you call on a customer, who do you see?

As a sales representative for the Office Products Division of IBM, you'd see the management of America's top companies. And that's significant. Because as an IBM sales representative you're more than just another "hardware salesman." You're helping management solve their communication problems with some of the most advanced equipment ever manufactured—including the famous "Selectric" Typewriter, "Executary" Dictation Equipment, and the new Magnetic Tape "Selectric" Typewriter.

No wonder the top men in business leave their doors open to the IBM sales representative, is it? If you have a college degree, or two or three years of sales experience—and if you're looking for a growing future with a growing company—drop us a line or contact the University Placement Office. It could be your foot in the door to a new and challenging career.

Interviews for sales representatives for the Office Products Division of IBM Corporation will be held in the Placement Office, on campus, on April 28. You must sign up in the Placement Office prior to this date. IBM is an Equal Opportunity Employer.
