

To Work in Ecuador

Hearn Accepts USAID Offer

Arthur C. Hearn of the University has accepted an invitation from the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to direct a survey of secondary education in Ecuador.

Hearn, a professor of education, was in Quito, Ecuador, for three weeks in March, conferring with members of his survey team. During his visit, he met with government officials and members of the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the Organization of American States (OAS), and USAID, and compiled an interview guide for the survey.

The five-member team of sociologists and educators from Ecuador, and the United States, will conduct a series of interview-visitations of selected schools in order to aid the government in an appraisal of the secondary school system.

The survey is being conducted now and Hearn will go to Ecuador in June to begin work on compiling the data. He and his team will summarize their findings and make recommendations to the government which will set the tone for future organization of secondary schools in Ecuador. He expects to complete the program by early September.
