

Student Court Hears Two Cheating Cases

By JAQI THOMPSON
Emerald Staff Writer

Student Court sanctioned two students for academic cheating in two hearings Thursday. In both cases the students, both freshmen, were sanctioned to disciplinary probation until the end of spring term 1967.

In the first case, a closed hearing, the defendant pleaded guilty to violation of Section I.B. 2.a. of the Student Conduct Code, in that he copied part of a question on an exam in Chemistry 106.

In the second case the defendant pleaded guilty to the same violation, in that she copied a four-part question on an exam in Physical Science Survey 106 from the person sitting next to her. This person was not aware at the time that the defendant was copying.

Included in her sanction was restriction to her dormitory from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday until the end of the current term.

Little Concert Series Offers Brass Quintet

The Eastman Brass Quintet will present a concert at 8 p.m. Monday, in the Music School Auditorium.

Admission is by season tickets or by individual tickets at the door. Prices are $2.50 for adults and $2 for students.

The ensemble was organized in 1961 as a feature of the Annual Summer Brass Institute at Eastman School of Rochester, N.Y. The quintet performs the entire spectrum of brass literature from the 16th century to present-day composers.

The quintet's concert at the University will include compositions by LeClerc, Maurer, Gabrieli, Bach, and other composers of the 16th through 20th centuries.

The concert is one of the final offerings of the season in the Little Concert Series sponsored by the Student Union Board.

Honorary Elects

Alpha Phi Omega, University men's service honorary, recently elected officers for the 1966-67 school year:

President, Mike Holtzclaw; first vice president, Tom Maskall; second vice president, Marty Boyeser; secretary, Bob Harris; and treasurer, Jeff Williams.

pointed out this was her first offense, and said he felt assured it wouldn't happen again.

Pertinent to the case, he felt, were the pressures from the low (below 2.) G.P.A. of the defendant, and the conduciveness of the situation to cheating. Due to a lack of space, students had to take the exam in adjoining seats. The person on the defendant's left was right-handed, and so the exam paper was tipped to the right. This was "practically like shoving it (the paper) right in her (the defendant's) face," concluded counsel.

Geologist Presents Brazilian Journey

Colored slides taken on a trip across the Andes Mountains and down the Amazon River will be shown by Walter Youngquist, professor of geology at the University, to illustrate his lecture "Over the Hill and Down the Creek."

He will lecture before the Eugene Natural History Society meeting at 8 p.m. Friday in 150 Science.

Youngquist made the trip on foot across the Andes Mountains in Peru, then floated down the Ucayali River, one of the main tributaries of the Amazon River, and continued down the Amazon to its mouth in northeastern Brazil. The trip was taken at the end of three years spent in Peru as chief of the Special Studies Section for International Petroleum Company.

Youngquist is the author of a book, "Over the Hill and Down the Creek," based on the Amazon trip and other experiences. The book was due to be released the first week in May.

Youngquist Publishes

"Investing in Natural Resources," a book written by Walter Youngquist, professor of geology, has been announced for summer publication.

The book, which is an outgrowth of Youngquist's work as a consultant to oil companies and investment firms, will appear as part of Fell's Business Bookshelf series.

Professor Publishes

An article by Richard A. Smith, assistant professor of architecture at the University, has been published in the Japan Architect, April 1966.

HUAC Represses Speech Says Civil Rights Leader

Lyle Mercer of Seattle gave an informal talk Thursday night on the National Committee to Abolish the House on Un-American Activities Committee, held in Chicago April 31 and May 1.

Mercer pointed out that HUAC is now 21 years old, having been born in a period of political crisis similar, if not identical, to those confronting the country at the present time. Since then, HUAC, along with such organizations as the FBI, has been instrumental in repressing free discussion.

Citing many examples of people losing jobs due to HUAC investigation, as well as his own experiences, Mercer demonstrated HUAC methods of intimidation. He also reported on the progress to date of the Committee to abolish HUAC, and expressed his satisfaction at the growing opposition to HUAC.

Mercer is active in several civil rights organizations and is a member of the board of directors of the Seattle chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

He said that because of his political activities, he had been intimidated by the FBI, and branded "hard-core Communist" merely because he didn't want to talk to them.

He gave special attention to recent HUAC citations for contempt lodged against civil liberties and peace groups and the plans in Congress to debate the rules under which HUAC operates. The opposition to HUAC, Mercer said, has recently been joined by Representatives Green and Duncan, Oregon Democrats.

Especially adamant about the civil rights and peace movements, Mercer said that because they have come in conflict with the status quo, they have been intimidated to HUAC and the FBI.

"Part of our job," he said, "is to educate people about HUAC and its tie-in with hate groups. It typifies all the repressions in our society against freedom of speech."

Scholars to Attend Philosophy Confab

Scholars of philosophy from universities in the United States, Canada, and Great Britain will take part in the first annual Colloquium in Philosophy today through Sunday at the University.

The three-day colloquium will feature papers by Keith S. Donnellan of Cornell University; G. N. A. Vesey, University of London; and Terence Penelhum, University of Alberta, Calgary.

Vesey will be at the University this summer to conduct a graduate seminar entitled "The Embodied Mind" and an upper division course on problems in the philosophy of the mind.

He is a lecturer in philosophy at King's College of the University of London.

One paper will be presented each day, followed by comment and a discussion session later in the day.

Hell's Angels Threaten Eugene; S.A.E. House

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity has just received word from anonymous sources, that the Hell's Angels motorcycle club is planning to take over their house as headquarters for any Eugene activities they might pursue this coming weekend.

It seems as though several students in the house are personal friends with some of the cyclists. S.A.E.'s are hoping the visit will be a friendly one. In any case, they have requested that police not harass the motorcyclists, and let them stay the night and move on peaceably. "Any police action might provoke an unnecessary incident" said one of the S.A.E.'s.

Over 100 of the gang will be arriving early Saturday evening, and warnings have been sent out to women's living organizations to keep their doors locked, and residents off the streets after dark.

It seems the Hells Angels have a list of co-eds whom they are especially interested in finding for one reason or another. For the safety of these girls, we urge that they stay away from the S.A.E. house Saturday night, or else they might end up at a wild Hell's Angels party.
