

Council Affirms Own Functions

By ANNETTE BUCHANAN
Emerald Managing Editor

The Student-Faculty Council spent nearly two hours Thursday trying to determine its function and rights, in anticipation of future faculty opposition.

The discussion hinged on the question of whom the Council is responsible to—the Faculty Senate or the full faculty. A related issue is whether the Council can make recommendations to the faculty or must wait until it is requested to do so.

Some time was spent explaining the legislative procedure of faculty meetings to the students present. Horace Robinson, professor of speech, explained that a notice of motion is given at one meeting. It is then discussed at the next meeting of the Faculty Senate.

The motion is made at the next meeting of the full faculty. After it is seconded the report of the Faculty Senate is heard before the proponent of the motion is allowed to speak for it.

The group did agree that it should provide an "avenue, or forum, for students," in order to present their views to the faculty, in the words of Robert Holmes, a sophomore in anthropology.

"Is it not the function of this Council to expedite students' wishes to have something brought before the faculty?" Holmes asked. The Council agreed with his statement.

It was pointed out that any student or faculty member wishing to bring something before the Council could address it to the chairman, Robert Horn, professor of English, and he will place it on the agenda.

The Council unanimously accepted a resolution proposed by Horn recognizing the services of outgoing ASUO President Steve Goldschmidt.

"The Student-Faculty Council wishes to record its appreciation of the distinguished services of Mr. Steve Goldschmidt as president of the ASUO.

"It takes particular satisfaction in having been a part in securing his admission, along with that of another student, to the floor of the University Faculty before the conclusion of his term of office.

"Whatever the Council may be able to accomplish in constructive relationships between students and faculty in the future, it will be directly or indirectly indebted to his untiring and fine spiritual leadership for a long time to come."

Petitions - Applications

SU COMMITTEES

Petitions are due today for the following Student Union Committees: talent, personnel, publicity, forum, movie, arts, games, recorded classes, jazz, and dance.

The petitions will be accepted until 5 p.m. in Room 301 SU. Petitions and information about the committees are available in the same room.

DEGREES

Today is the deadline for degree candidates to submit applications for June Commencement.

The registrar's office will enforce this date.

All documents necessary for the awarding of a degree must be on file in the registrar's office by the end of spring term.

Any student who applied for previous commencements and did not receive degrees must re-apply.

Last Production Offered at UT

Lillian Hellman's first produced play, "The Children's Hour," will be the last major production of the University Theatre 1965-66 season. The challenging drama is set to open May 20th, and run May 21, 22, 23, 27, and 28, on the U.T. main stage. Tickets at $1.50, will go on sale at the U.T. Box Office, ext. 1781 at noon Monday.

Director for the show will be Horace W. Robinson, Director of the Theatre. Robinson, noting that the play's title can be misleading if one is not familiar with it, has termed the drama "a mature problem play designed primarily for adult audiences." He has advised considerable care and discretion on the part of parents in deciding whether or not their children should attend. The play is in part about children but is not specifically for children.

In reply to charges that the play relies on "sensationalism" or that it is "controversial," Robinson has stated: "We cannot assume responsibility for the play's reputation and the only way we can answer any charges which may have been made against it, or against the Theatre for its inclusion in our season's offering, is to urge you to see the production for yourself and form your own conclusions as a direct result of that experience."

Ann Martin and Don Hackstaff are Assistant Directors, and Holly Johnson is Costume Designer. Anthony L. Kadlec, U.T. Technical Director, has designed the interior settings for this show.

Patricia Larson, Barbara Chatas, and Karen Higgins Hurley are cast in the leading roles.

SDS to Distribute Counter Draft Test

On Saturday, Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) will distribute a counter draft test in Commonwealth Hall to those students taking the national selective service examination.

The SDS test will ask fair and objective questions about the war and the student's relation to it.

The purpose of the test is to stimulate the student to reflect on personal ideas of a real democracy, the citizen's relation to it, and what our country is now becoming.

Tests will also be given in Ashland, North Bend and Klamath Falls.

Indian Students Offer Musical Comedy Film

The University Indian Students Association will present a full-length musical comedy film, "When You Fall in Love With Someone," 7:30 p.m. Saturday in room 150 Science.

The film is in Hindi, and English subtitles are also shown.

Admission is $1 per person. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

Chorale Presents Saturday Concert

The University Chorale will present the large choral work, "A Psalm of David" by Norman Dello Joio, during its spring concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, at the School of Music auditorium.

H. Royce Saltzman is conductor of the University Chorale.

Assisting the chorale during the Dello Joio work will be the University Brass Ensemble, conducted by Ira D. Lee; organist Albert Wagner of Eugene; and pianist Karen Arnesen, Lakeport, Calif.

The brass ensemble will also present a solo performance of Giovanni Gabrieli's "Canzon Quarti Toni" and assist the University Chorale for Ralph Vaughan Williams' "O Clap Your Hands."

Four soloists will be featured during the University Chorale's rendition of Mozart's "Regina Coeli, K. 276." They are Jill Hardin, Eugene, soprano; Christine Helman, Medford; Guy Aydelott, Eugene, tenor; and Richard Clark, Eugene, bass.

Other works which the University Chorale will perform are Brahms' "Lass Dich nur Nichts Nicht Dauren," and Anton Bruckner's "Christus Factus Est."

The public is invited to attend the concert free of charge.
