

Scholarships Awarded To Journalism Students

Winners of journalism scholarships for the 1966-67 academic year have been announced by the School of Journalism faculty at the University.

Susan B. Avery was named winner of the $400 Minneapolis Star scholarship for the outstanding student in journalism at the University.

Miss Avery has also been awarded a $100 School of Journalism gift fund scholarship.

Mrs. Sandra Brown Hockersmith and Elaine Louise Davenport are winners of $500 Eugene Register-Guard Eric Allen scholarships given in memory of the late Eric W. Allen, first dean of the school of journalism.

A third Register-Guard scholarship of $100 has been awarded to Norman D. Fox, a sophomore at the University. The scholarship is provided by the 20-Year Club of employees of the newspaper to a student who shows promise in the field of newspaper journalism.

Rande Wilmarth has received the Bernard Mainwaring Memorial scholarship presented by the Salem Capital-Journal in memory of the late Bernard Mainwaring, publisher of the newspaper. The scholarship of full tuition of $330 for the academic year is in recognition of Wilmarth's scholastic achievement and professional contribution to the Emerald.

William Randolph Hearst Foundation scholarships valued at $150 each have been awarded to Mrs. Kaye Dauna Johnson, Michael Jay Badger and Annette Buchanan.

Three Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association scholarships valued at $200 each were awarded to Julie Tripp, Jill Campbell, and Glen W. Davis.

John Paul Kosydar and Mary Frances Stamp have been named winners of two $1,000 Jackson Foundation scholarships, which are given for academic and professional achievement. The scholarships are awarded by vote of the faculty of the Journalism School on behalf of the Jackson Foundation.

Gwen Toedter was awarded a $100 scholarship by the Portland Professional chapter of Theta Sigma Phi. The scholarship is awarded in memory of the late Emma McKinney, for many years dean of Oregon newswomen and publisher of the Hillsboro Argus. Theta Sigma Phi is a national professional society for women in journalism.

Shota Ushio was named winner of the Harpham Award. The award, carrying a $25 stipend, is made each year for the best journalistic writing or term paper by a foreign student in the School of Journalism. It is donated by Mr. and Mrs. Everett H. Harpham of Eugene.

Mrs. Patricia Ann Koval won the $50 T. Neil Taylor award for the best thesis presented to the school during the current academic year. In her thesis, Mrs. Koval made a comparative study of the magazines Commonweal and America and their handling of news of the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

Mrs. Mary Aleen Holly received the Hillsboro Argus award, given each year to the highest-ranking senior in journalism. The award in the form of a plaque, is given in honor of the late Mrs. Emma McKinney, long-time publisher of the Hillsboro newspaper.

Business School Gives Awards

Annual awards of prizes, fellowships, and scholarships to students in the business field have been announced by the School of Business Administration.

Phillip Solomon and Carl Bellas have each received a three-year National Defense Education Act Fellowship Award of $2,200 a year, enabling them to continue studies toward a doctoral degree.

Solomon also received a Has-kin and Sells Teaching Fellowship in accounting.

The H. T. Miner Research Fellowship of $1,800 has been awarded to Lester W. Jacobs.

Weyerhaeuser Award
A Weyerhaeuser Fellowship of $2,000 has been awarded to graduate student Thomas Hinthorne.

American Accounting Association Graduate Fellowships of $1,000 each have been awarded to graduate students Raymond Larson and Donald Rogers.

Larson has also received a $1,000 scholarship provided by the Price-Waterhouse Foundation.

Other scholarship recipients include: Steve Winfee, a $500 Autzen Foundation scholarship; Victor J. Kucera and Ray E. Lewis, First National Bank of Oregon $500 awards; Randall C. Guyer, a Jimmy Burleson, Jr., scholarship of $100.

Five $25 awards from Erickson, Eiseman & Co. have been given to Kathleen Ann Boone, David K. McAdams, David E. Cooke, Dwight W. Catherwood, and Steve Winfree.

Comish Award
Edith Ann Williamson has been awarded the Comish Award in Marketing of $30.

Other award winners include: William D. Nordgarden, Alpha Kappa Psi scholarship award; Karen Elmquest, Phi Chi Theta key; Jo Ellen Sanderson, Phi Chi Theta award; James Christian Thompson, Wall Street Journal award; Richard M. Nockleby, Financial Executive Institute award; Carol L. Hatley, Business Education Award of Merit; Charles S. Windus, Oregon State Society of Certified Public Accountants' prize.
