

Moorhead Elected to Post On UNESCO Committee

Jennelle Moorhead, professor in the State Division of Continuing Education and professor at the University, has been elected to the Executive Committee of the United States National Commission for UNESCO.

Mrs. Moorhead's work on the Committee will involve discussion of the aspects of UNESCO's world program and discussion of three new programs: education of women, education of the special child, and a department for youth.

Mrs. Moorhead was elected at the Commission's national convention in New Orleans, Louisiana, Sept. 18-20. She attended the convention as an appointed member of the Commission and as National Parent-Teachers Association president.

Mrs. Moorhead will serve a one year term on the 22-member

Executive Committee. She will leave Wednesday to attend a State Department meeting in Washington, D.C., on Thursday with the United States delegation to the UNESCO General Assembly.

The Executive Committee represents the National Commission, an advisory body established by Congress to help the United States government carry out its responsibilities in UNESCO — the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

One of the tasks of the Commission is to analyze and make recommendations on UNESCO's proposed biennial program and budget.

Mrs. Moorhead previously served three 3-year terms on the 100-member Commission, appointed by three different secretaries of state.

After attending the UNESCO meeting in Washington, D.C., Mrs. Moorhead will attend the executive committee meeting of the International Union of Family Organizations in Paris, October 13. She is vice-president of the Union.

She will also speak to the Irish Teachers' Association in Dublin before returning to Oregon to keynote the Women's Day program at Treasure Valley College in Ontario October 25.

The Ting foot odor test:

- 1 Take off your right shoe.
- 2 Okay — who do you know who could use a foot deodorant? (One guess).
- 3 Now spray your feet with Ting. Test is over. So is foot odor. Ting is loaded with hexachlorophene. It kills odor causing germs by the millions. This wonderfully cooling powder helps keep your feet dry and odorless. All day.

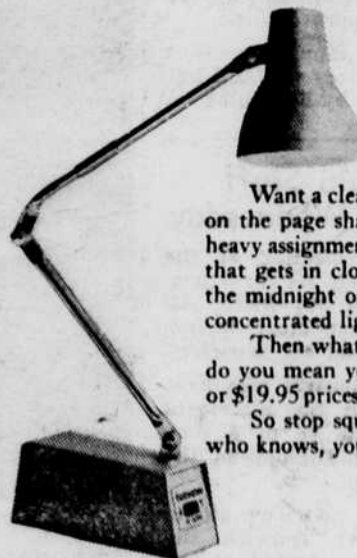

If you don't wear shoes you don't need Ting
