

UO Faces Revamped Washington

By PAUL POLSKY
Emerald Sports Writer

The Oregon Ducks, 44 strong, will wing their way northward at 10 o'clock this morning for their Saturday engagement with the Washington Huskies in Seattle.

Head Coach Len Casanova had plenty to worry about Thursday in preparing his squad for the always tough Huskies.

"The loss of Donny Moore will help them," he said. "It will raise the team morale, they will be more determined, sort of like a regular crusade." Moore will be replaced by Billy Parker.

Cas also fears the elements. "I don't like the rain at all, so many things can happen; it is so unpredictable," he frowned. "It'll hurt our speed, and some of the things we like to do."

The weather in Seattle most of the week has been sloppy with lots of showers, and the conditions for Saturday are not expected to improve noticeably. In fact, it was so bad Thursday that Husky coach Jim Owens took his warriors inside for practice.

Most of the week the Ducks have been working on their pass defense and offensive formations. "It has been a routine work week," noted Cas.

Psychological Gimmick

Well almost routine: the Ducks have been working against some of the freshman and subs who have been outfitted in purple and gold uniforms, a "psychological gimmick" as Cas puts it, to give them a good look at Husky formations and plays.

Taking another look at the enemy Cas expressed fears in the person of Washington quarterback Tom Sparlin. "He is a real dangerous kid, fast, and a good runner. He is a good passer and can throw awfully long."

Cas also mentioned that Sparlin has a little extra incentive to drive him to an outstanding performance against the Lemon and Green.

"Sparlin wanted to come to Oregon; we already had two quarterbacks at the time."

The two quarterbacks were Dick

Tzar, You're an Ace

Jones of Pendleton, and Mike Barnes of Medford. Sparlin is from Grants Pass.

Cope Out

Another problem arose for the Ducks when Husky Jim Cope was ruled out of Saturday's game with mononucleosis. Cope was the fastest of the Husky receivers and complemented end Dave Williams in the pass catching department. Cope's replacement is Don Martin and the Duck coach staff does not know a lot about him. The original plans called for Kenny Klien to guard Cope with Jim Smith attached to Dave Williams. Whether this will have an effect on the defensive backfield plans will remain to be seen.

Duck fans will remember Williams, the tall, rangy end, who destroyed the Ducks with his amazing catches in last year's 24-20 thriller at Multnomah Stadium, won by the Huskies.

Williams is 6-2 and 195 pounds with good range, speed, and an excellent pair of hands. He is the second leading receiver on the Washington squad, behind Cope.

Other Changes

Other last minute changes for the Huskies include Al Worley in the defensive backfield to replace the injured Dave Dillon. Gerald Wea has been tabbed to start at fullback ahead of Jeff Jordan, a regular from last year.

When asked if he thought his team was prepared for the game, Cas said, "I hope we are." "We'll have to be both physically prepared and mentally right."

He quickly added: "After two straight losses the Huskies will be mad. The press really gets on them up there, getting them mad."

It was reported that one writer in Seattle wrote: "This is the biggest collapse since the Narrows Bridge," referring of course to the Husky's 24-20 loss to Cal and 17-14 setback at the hands of USC.

Mallard Booters Set Home Debut

Oregon's Mallard soccer team makes its home debut Saturday, hosting Lewis and Clark at 2 p.m. on the men's P.E. field. The Mallards will be looking for their first victory, after dropping the season opener 5-3 to University of Portland last week.

Oregon's Duck team will be highly favored over host Reed College in another weekend game. The Ducks blanked Lewis and Clark 12-0 last week, while Reed lost a 6-1 decision at Oregon State.

The Mallard-Pioneer match is expected to be much closer, and is a "must" game for both teams. Two losses will virtually eliminate a team in the 10-game Oregon Intercollegiate Soccer Association season.

Seattle Bound? Watch Bombers

Going to the Oregon-Washington game this weekend?

Why not stay over in Seattle until Sunday to see another Eugene team in action?

That team is the Eugene Bombers, and the game is the biggest pro contest of the year.

The Bombers, who have a 5-1 Pacific Football League mark, meet the undefeated Seattle Ramblers at 2 p.m. in the West Seattle Stadium.

Eugene's only loss of the season was to the Ramblers October 2, a loss coaches blamed on mental errors.

Head coach Jack Crabtree, who starred as an Oregon quarterback

The Eugene-Seattle game will be broadcast over KWFS-AM radio, 1540 kc., beginning at 1:45 p.m. Sunday with pre-game interviews.

in the '50's, said his team morale this week has been "very high" and the team is "as prepared as it possibly could be."

He has two ex-Duck quarterbacks guiding the Bombers this year—Roger Daniels and Doug Post.

Other former Oregon grid stars playing offense for Eugene include split end Ray Palm, flanker Paul Burleson, fullback Dick Winn, right half Hugh Oldham and offensive guard Ed Thomas.

Defensively, Crabtree has linebackers Tim Casey, Jack Clark and Ancer Haggerty and defensive halfbacks John Ripper, Eddie Lynn and Vic Grahn.

IS THE WIGGLY SCENE FOR YOU?

It's the latest hang-up. The psychedelic Go-Go scene. Soon it will be the big noise on campus. The current issue of The Saturday Evening Post takes you on the rounds of New York's "total-environment" nightclubs. Experience the frantic kaleidoscope of flashing lights, movies, slides, colored smoke and deafening rock 'n' roll that give you an LSD trip with no side effects. Get with New York's "Take-Over Generation" as they Jelly Belly their cares away. Find out what to wear when making the new scene: bust shields, fluorescent mini-skirts, silver motorcycle jackets, aluminum wigs. Is this really a new art media as its inventor believes? Is it for your school? Find out in the October 22 issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Pick up on it today, baby.
