

Faculty Senate to Consider Proposals

Editor's Note: These are the four motions which the Faculty Senate will consider later this month.

The Faculty Senate will then make recommendations on what action should be taken at the next general faculty meeting, February 1.

The first two motions were prepared by the Faculty Senate itself and presented at both the December and January meetings of the full faculty.

The other two motions were offered by John Shepherd, University director of broadcast services, and Aaron Novick, director of the Institute of Molecular Biology, as substitutes for the Faculty Senate proposals.

Senate Motion 1

That the faculty approve in principle the suggestion made by the Advisory Council of 1965-66 that present methods of evaluating teaching be supplemented by more systematic evaluations, provided:

(1) That any information about teaching effectiveness collected for administrative use not be published in any form, and

(2) That, if student ratings are used for administrative purposes to evaluate teaching effectiveness, these ratings be collected and interpreted independently of any rating programs operated by the students, and that faculty participation in any student ratings be voluntary.

Senate Motion 2

That the faculty approve the continuance of the student reaction survey, with suitable refinements.

Shepherd's Motion

(1) That the faculty endorse the opinion of the 1965-66 Advisory Council that there is need for more systematic and objective devices for the evaluation of effective teaching, as a part of the criteria for promotion and tenure.

(2) That the faculty instruct the Advisory Council to work with the University administration in the formulation and implementation of ways to achieve this end which, in the judgment of the Advisory Council, are consistent with the basic principles of academic freedom.

(3) That any device for the evaluation of teaching as a criterion for promotion and tenure shall be introduced only with the approval of the Advisory Council, and that its use shall be discontinued if, in the judgment of the Advisory Council, it is found to be objectively invalid or to be inconsistent with the basic principles of academic freedom.

(4) That the Advisory Council be authorized to approve, subject to the provisions of paragraph (3), a program of teaching evaluation, provided:

(a) That participation in such a program by individual faculty members be voluntary.

(b) That rating forms be distributed only after review and approval by the Advisory Council.

(c) That any individual faculty member participating in a rating program used to provide a criterion for promotion and tenure may, on request, inspect the collected data and the statistical summary concerning his teaching, before such data and summary are used by the Advisory Council and the administration, and may file, as an intrinsic part of his teaching-rating record, any comments he may wish to make concerning this material.

(d) That such evaluation data, including any comments by the individual faculty member, shall be made available to the Advisory Council, the President, the academic deans, and department heads, and no other person or agency except on explicit approval of the Advisory Council.

Andrews will speak on his summer, 1966, field research study at little known Maya ceremonial center near Comalcalco, Tarasco, Mexico. The talk will be in 106 Lawrence and is open to the public.

Four students from three areas of study assisted in the interdisciplinary study. The students, who will be introduced during the lecture, include:

Don Hardesty and Floyd Miller, both graduate students in anthropology; Howard Kerr Jr., graduate student in landscape architecture, and Richard Mogel, a senior in mathematics who formerly majored in architecture.

Concert Series Sets Hungarian Quartet

The famed Hungarian Quartet will return to the University for a concert performance of Brahms, Bartok and Schubert at 8 p.m. today in the School of Music Auditorium.

(e) That these data and statistical summaries of teaching evaluation shall not be published in any form.

Novick's Motion

Be it resolved:

That we are gratified that the students at the University have established a Course Evaluation Survey. Besides being of help to the student, such surveys can help the professor improve his teaching and can provide independent evidence to the administration for evaluating faculty teaching ability.

That we recognize that the students should have sole responsibility for this survey.

That we urge the administration to provide the students with the funds and facilities needed for the survey. We likewise urge that when the students wish, we provide what special skills we have in the design and operation of surveys.

That we trust that the administration will be able to use the information wisely, distinguishing fact from interpretation.

That we also recommend that the question of whether participation in the survey be compulsory or voluntary not be raised. Compulsory participation may be a violation of academic freedom and it would compel faculty participation in the planning and execution of the survey, which could well frustrate the basic intentions of the survey. A voluntary program, besides reducing the utility of the survey, has many insidious features. Means are available which would allow the students to conduct an adequate survey without formally raising the question of faculty participation.

Finally, that we welcome student participation in the improvement of teaching as a step toward the desirable goal of fuller faculty-student co-operation in the development of a better University.

Co-op Board Sets Election Dates

The University Co-operative Store board held its first meeting of the year Thursday.

Among the items on the agenda were campaign rules for election of student board members, the first ever written.

The campaign rules were authorized and presented by Vice President Paul Medlar. The rules stipulate that all candidates to the board must be Co-op members, and must have an accumulative G.P.A. of not less than 2.00.

The rules also provide that no candidate may spend over $40 on his campaign. After several slight modifications, the rules were approved by the board except for the dates of nomination and election which will be decided at a later date.

It was decided that balloting would be held at the Student Union for Co-op members who do not have their membership cards, pending approval of the SU Board. Polls would also be available at the Co-op.

Treasurer Jake Warsaw reported that for this term sales were $1,157,000 compared to $1,012,000 last year. He stated there was a 25 per cent increase in sales of merchandise on the main floor due mainly to better display and more room. Over all, there was a 12 per cent increase in sales, Warsaw said.

Manager Jerry Henson commented that there had been an estimated two and one-half to three per cent increase in price. "This has happened every year for the past eight to ten years," he said.

Methods for controlling shoplifting were also discussed at the meeting. The idea of posting a deputy sheriff at the Co-op during the first three days of the rush was proposed by the President, Vic Kucera, but was opposed because of possible student resentment.

It was finally decided that a detective agency should be contacted for an appraisal of the situation and the problem would be dealt with at the next meeting.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Mike Mansfield (D-Montana), introduced in the Senate today a proposed constitutional amendment which would lower the minimum voting age in federal elections from 21 to 18 years.
