

Senate Loses Quorum...

 ed to anything but the lottery deleted.

The amendment had seemingly passed when ASUO Vice-President Lee Bollinger announced he had voted in favor of it to break a 7-2 tie. However, Senator-at-large Chuck Stout objected to Bollinger's voting without first asking if any member wished to change his vote.

While parliamentarian Jim Beat checked for a ruling, Bollinger called for a re-vote and Senator-at-large Steve O'Leary, having originally abstained, voted against the amendment causing its failure.

After a minimum of discussion, the senate moved to vote on the entire bill. It was at this time that the opposing trio walked out, killing the quorum.

It wasn't the first time the body neared the point of dispersing as throughout the meeting the number present teetered around the necessary 15.

Nor was the amendment the first to be proposed. Senator Ben Bronfman, graduate student representative, at one time moved to have the entire bill deleted, except for the words "Abolish the draft." His measure was soundly defeated.

Senator Nancy Holmes moved at one point to include women in the lottery system. This idea, too, was defeated.

Maker of the motion Donahue explained after the meeting that even if he was the only one to sign the letter, nonetheless a letter would be sent to the Presidential Advisory Committee.

As Donahue's Public Affairs Committee had construed it, the lottery would include the names of all males between the ages of 18 and 35. These names would be drawn on a yearly basis so that each year, each individual would have a different figure.

Then, as needed, the military would take the men in order by number. This would only take place during time of a national emergency, however.

To maintain the armed forces during peace time, the bill recommended that Congress make the military more attractive financially, educationally, and experience-wise for enlistees.

In other action, the Senate recommended the lowering of the voting age from 21 to 18. The bill was introduced by Senator-at-large Greg Foote.

The bill called for the ASUO going on record as strongly favoring the lowering of the voting age and the sponsoring of a statewide campaign to gain approval of the state legislature in the 1967 legislative campaign.

If this campaign should fail, the ASUO would initiate a drive, in conjunction with other student groups in the state, to secure the necessary signatures to have the issue placed on the ballot of the 1968 Oregon primary election.

The idea of sponsoring the campaign and initiating the signature drive were tacked on by an amendment moved by McCloskey.

He stated that without this stipulation, the ASUO would be passing a bill which would have no eventual meaning.

Another part of the bill called for taking a copy of the legislation to Governor Tom McCall, Speaker of the House F. F. Montgomery, and the Oregon Legislature, and for sending a copy of it to the Oregon delegation in the United States Congress.

A notice of motion to introduce a bill to recommend the protection of sources for newsmen was also introduced at the meeting. This will be discussed next Thursday.

Senate Approves Dates of Elections

Thursday night the Senate approved dates for winter term ASUO elections. The primary elections will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday, February 1; the general election is from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday, February 8. The positions open are seven senators-at-large, one junior class representative, one freshman class representative, one women's off campus representative, and one freshman class vice president.

Petitions may be obtained in 301 Student Union and will be received until 5 p.m. Tuesday, January 24.

Basic rule changes made Thursday included giving the Student Court the power to rule on any violations, including on the spirit of the rules as well as on the rules themselves.

The court will meet several times during the course of the election instead of just twice.

National Student Strike Planned

CHICAGO (CPS)—The days of demonstration politics are apparently not over yet; another national student strike is in the wind.

Its proponents, as always, exude optimism; frustrations over the war and the draft continue to mount within the student community, the time is ripening, they say.

Bettina Aptheker, one of the leaders of the 1964 Berkeley Free Speech Movement and an old hand at this sort of thing, was in Chicago recently plugging for a preliminary strike conference. The idea was not, she explained, "to shut down all universities throughout the country" one day next week, but to involve "the many students who are not politically active but are against the war and the draft."

Though it would be possible to "shut down" certain schools with a strike, she said, local groups should, as always, have the option of deciding what form their action would take.

If there were some who had to stage a teach-in, they might want to do that, Miss Aptheker suggested.

A "call" issued for the strike planning conference (University of Chicago, December 28 and 29) maintains the strike "will serve notice on campus military recruiters and CIA researchers that the nation's campuses are 'off limits' for their activities — that American institutions for learning will not be the centers for the recruitment of cannon fodder or the development of new and refined techniques for killing."

The strike will take place in spring, possibly April 15, but to date, no date has been officially set.

Special Bible Services Slated

"Christian Unity" is the theme of two special Bible services planned by the Co-operative Christian Ministry of the University. The services will be held on Thursday and January 19, at noon in the Newman Student Center, 1850 Emerald Street.

Each service is designed to celebrate the givenness and present reality, as well as the problems of Christian unity through a short liturgy and three short homilies by campus ministers representing the CCM.

On Thursday the Rev. Kenneth Wieg (Lutheran) will speak on Isaiah 60.1-5. The Rev. Jay Rea (Disciples of Christ and American Baptist) will speak on Romans 12.1-5. Mr. Darrell Reinke (Missouri Synod Lutheran) will speak on John 1.29-34.

On Thursday, January 19, the Rev. G. Gordon Goldthwaite (Presbyterian and United Church) will speak on Deuteronomy 18.15-19. The Rev. Father Jack Hilyard (Episcopal) will speak on Romans 12.6-16. The Rev. Father Bruno Gibson (Roman Catholic) will speak on John 2.1-12.

All students and faculty are invited to participate.

Debaters to Attend Speech Tournament

Fifteen University students are taking part this weekend in the Pacific Northwest Invitational Speech Tournament at Seattle Pacific College.

Six debate teams will represent the University in debates on the subject of U.S. foreign policy. The debaters, and four additional persons, will also take part in impromptu and extemporaneous speaking, oratory, and interpretive reading events.

Coach W. Scott Nobles, associate professor of speech at the University, accompanied his forensics team to Seattle.
