interest in current affairs and pop music.

I shall be able to exchange ideas about the Nigerian situation, and that of the developing African nations. I want pen pals of both sexes and preferably adults.

Fortunately, I was presented with a 1966 issue of your newspaper and the articles are very interesting, especially your views about the Viet Nam war.

I hope that you'll kindly introduce me to the students and the other Oregonians.

Parallels

Emerald Editor:

In his article of April 17, Tom Trovato has provided us all with a lucidly painted example of a mentality which a college education should hopefully have eradicated. He has told us that not everyone is human enough to be heard. Mr. Trovato has shown us a mentality which permits the leaning-on—perhaps walking-on—of those persons we don't like for strictly personal reasons. The parallels between Mr. Trovato's advocacy and a bill now pending (on April 17) in the Oregon Legislature are apparent.

"Mal Trovato"

Emerald Editor:

I came over to the Student Union last Wednesday just a little too late to witness the confrontation of hippies and straights that led to Mr. Trovato's letter in the Monday issue of the Emerald, so I cannot comment on the incident. But as a reader I will comment on Mr. Trovato's letter.

Throughout the letter Mr. Trovato presented his "beliefs and ideas concerning these people" in a way that led me to gratitude and paradoxical distress. Gratitude that he cares about anything so much, and that the Emerald in its usual way featured such a letter; distress at the signs of random anger and hatred that inform Mr. Trovato's critical spirit.

If the "filthy, long-haired, disgusting, squealing slob," the "dirty little people" ever shift gears and take the same road of violence along which Mr. Trovato has already gone, we're in trouble. Especially since we need only translate locale and participants by analogy into any one of a hundred other factional-minded groups of individuals to see how close we may be to the abyss: Chinese Reds vs. Russian Reds, moderate-anti-Johnsonites vs. extreme anti-Johnsonites—the list is endless and potential in each of us, you, reader.

For me to pay any attention to remarks I've heard from respectable straights about the ATO's—that they represent on campus the worst of what fraternities have exemplified—is to fall into the same trap I abhor, the confusion between groups and individuals that lies behind Mr. Trovato's spleen. Apparently neither his sociological training nor his liberating education has yet taught him to bend and sway a little when facing this confusion.

I shall hope for his future along with ours.

If he were a student of mine, or a friend, or a son, I would ask him to read Marianne Moore's "In distrust of merits." Lacking the opportunity I merely quote one portion of it: "I must fight til I have conquered in myself what causes war."

Take it to heart, sir; your present stance is mal trovato, needs correcting.
