

SUNNY WEATHER brought another chalk-in Thursday—for a while. Soon after the designs were drawn and slogans were scrawled (by fraternity men and others) two students came along with mops and water and slobbered them off. Then rain did the rest.

SDS Not 'Hippie' Says Officer

By DAN BENNETT
Emerald Staff Writer

"We are all individuals," said Dennis Stovall, SDS executive council member, "and we are united in our effort to uphold the right of each person to develop as an individual."

Speaking Thursday evening at the Delta Tau Delta fraternity, Stovall proceeded to explain the often misunderstood purposes of the Students for Democratic Society.

Despite the rather poor image of SDS members which exist in the minds of many, he said, the organization, in its initial conception at least, has been dedicated to the promotion of a form of democratic socialism which advocates the extension of freedom into every phase of life.

Stovall conceded, that SDS members at Oregon are partially to blame for the growing dichotomy between their organization and other students because of their frequent cynicism and appearance of idle protestation.

The SDS representative emphasized that although their ultimate goals are basically similar, individual members of the organization have different ways of manifesting these goals. He pointed out, however, that he himself could not claim to speak for the entire group, but himself only.

After his short presentation, Stovall answered a multitude of questions from the audience, most in reference to the apparent paradox between the organizations stated goals and its actions.

Responding to a question asking him to distinguish a "hippie" from an SDS member, Stovall said the hippie would not be a member of SDS because the group is dedicated to improving society, while the hippies has, in effect, said "to hell with society, because society is hell."
