

Speakers Boast Trophies

Last Friday and Saturday at the 11th annual Oregon Forensic Tournament, the University as host school won eight of the 16 available trophies awarded in the individual competition events.

Thirty-nine schools from Oregon, Washington, Idaho, California and Nevada participated in the tournament held in the EMU.

About 450 students from 40 to 50 colleges and universities in the six states participated. Scott Nobles, University speech coach, was the director of the two-day weekend tournament.

Speakers and debaters competed in five events — debate, extemporaneous and expository speaking, oratory, and oral interpretation of literature.

Under debate there were three divisions: junior (for freshmen and sophomores), women's, and open (which usually consists of senior men). In the junior division one University team, Mike Molyneux and Jim Green, won first place. The other team, Bob Corso and Joe Dean, won second.

In the women's section two Oregon teams, Starla Banta and Becky Nobles, Susan Tungate and Roxie Merrell, tied for first.

SWINE to Have 'Bacon Brigade'

SWINE met Thursday to exchange ideas for raising money. Suggestions including begging, theft and selling tickets.

The Students Wildly Indignant About Nearly Everything finally decided on showing Charlie Chaplin movies. No date has been set.

Sub-assistant editor Walter Wentz, who owns some Chaplin films, conducted the meeting in the absence of SWINE's Imperial Grand Boar, David Adams. Adams was, as Wentz put it, "exercising his presidential prerogative by not showing up, for which he is to be highly commended."

SWINE prefers inactive officers. Most of its members are inactive, too—five of the 91 members came to the meeting.

SWINE also discussed possible satirical publications. Tentative titles are "Rampots," "The New Porker," and "Plowboy."

Noting that most other groups today have a militant faction, SWINE felt it should have something similar. The "Bacon Brigade" is now recruiting volunteers.

Oregon in a split decision in the open division. The Oregon members were Greg Mowe and Gary Roberts.

Individual events were held under extemporaneous, expository, oratory and oral interpretation speaking. There were two divisions: junior (men and women) and senior (men and women).

The results of Oregon participants in the different individual divisions were as follows, expository: Sue Tungate first in junior women's, Becky Nobles second in senior women's, Joe Dean second in junior men's, Ron Kilby first in senior men's.

In the oratory section Kathleen Umreim won second and Virginia Bailey was third among junior women, Bob Corso was first in junior men's, and John Eads first in the senior

Film Presents Raft Ocean Trips

A color film of two voyages across the Pacific Ocean, entitled "Kantuta—in the Wake of Kon-Tiki," will be presented in 150 Science at 8 p.m. tonight.

The historic voyages from Peru to Polynesia were undertaken by Eduard Ingris in a balsa log raft in support of Thor Heyerdahl, who sought to prove that such journeys were made by the Incas of ancient Peru to originally settle the Polynesian Islands.

The film, which is personally narrated by Ingris and his wife, Nina Ingris, describes the first voyage from its origin in the Andes to rescue by the U.S. Navy from a giant whirlpool. The second voyage includes scenes of storms and raft life and the successful landing on Matahiva island.

Background music by Ingris incorporates themes inspired by his travels.

Tickets, available at the door, are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. The showing is sponsored by the Social Division of the Erb Memorial Union.
