Mostly General

MARY McCLENDON, a sophomore in Urban planning, has been appointed to the Student Conduct Code Committee, ASUO President Scott Farleigh announced recently.

PLC Lecture Room Offers New Comfort

Many students found the time schedule correct because Prince Lucien Campbell did have a new lecture room after discovering that a particular class was not held in its former location.

After about a year of construction, the fences have come down and most of the construction material moved away. Students now have a large lecture room, 180 PLC with cushioned seats which are equipped with arm desks.

Opposing opinions were stated by two sophomore girls. A student in social science said, "It's like a barn with cushioned seats. The seats are comfortable but you can't hear a word the lecturer says."

"The shapes in the ceiling above the lecturer are interesting," said the other co-ed, a student in social psychology. She also said, "Acoustically I've seen better halls, but the seats are nice. I sort of like it, its pleasing to me because its stark."

Wet paint signs were still hanging at the end of some rows of seats Monday. The second co-ed made the comment that, "I didn't like the fact that the seat numbers stuck to your back because the paint was still wet."

Some students have said that the smell of paint begins to effect them near the end of a lecture. Others have said the seats are so comfortable they could fall asleep.

Maturity

Maturity is probably the most sensitive word in a college student's vocabulary. Some have reached maturity far beyond their years, and others are finding it a new challenge, yet, to be fully met. At The College Inn, we try to treat our residents as mature students. Restrictions and petty rules are kept to a minimum. Each person is considered an individual. 4,000 university students enjoy living and being treated this way. Beginning next term, you can live at The College Inn for only $679.000 for the remainder of the year. Reservations limited.
