IEC Recruits Counselors

The University's International Education Center is recruiting students to serve as counselors, friends and roommates for the 1968 "International Student Orientation."

The program, approved by University President Arthur S. Flemming and Foreign Student Advisor Kenneth Ghent, provides for close, informal counseling for all incoming foreign students next September.

Forty American or foreign students who have previously attended the University will be chosen as counselors.

Those selected for the program will meet with new foreign students over the period of September 17-21. Both the counselors and their proteges will participate in the total program. The counselors will provide small informal groups to explain registration procedures, the use of library and school facilities, and to familiarize the students with lectures and note-taking.

The new students will also be familiarized with American customs and introduced to seminars, informal recreation, and other activities.

ars, informal recreation, and other activities.

The IEC and the Office of Student Affairs hope that the program will destroy some of the delays and complications often involved with foreign students, and promote a "two-way street" of understanding and friendship between the two groups.

Students who are interested in serving as counselors for the 1968 Orientation should pick up applications at the IEC office, 319 EMU, or at the petitions box at 301 EMU. Petitions must be returned to IEC by Feb. 2.
