

Campus Happenings

Today

CHILD DEVELOPMENT in art will be discussed by Elliott Eisner, professor in art education at Stanford University, at 4 p.m. today in room 106, Lawrence Hall.

THE BROWSING ROOM LECTURE will be given by Chandler Beall, professor of Romance languages, on "Petrarch and the Renaissance Lyric" at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the EMU.

CANADIAN representation at the International Festival will be discussed at a meeting at 8:30 tonight in the EMU.

Future

LOUIS I. KAHN, University of Pennsylvania professor and practicing Philadelphia architect, will speak Thursday at 8 p.m. in the EMU as a part of the 1968 Festival of Arts.

AN UNUSUAL TWIST to Paul Hindemith's "Septet for Wind Instruments" will be featured in the 8 p.m. Thursday concert in the School of Music Recital Hall, to be performed by the University Woodwind Quintet.

The second movement of the five-movement work will be re-played backwards by members of the quintet, assisted by Raymond Wheeler, bass clarinet, and Gene Lewis, trumpet. Regular Quintet members are Richard Trombley, flute; Richard Henderson, oboe; Philip Hillstrom, French horn; Elmer Heron, clarinet; and Peter Bergquist, bassoon.

THE Colloquium Lecture will feature J. S. Shrauger from the State University of New York at 4 p.m. Thursday in room 207 Chapman Hall. Shrauger will speak on "Self-Evaluation as a Determinant of Interpersonal Attraction."

THE philosophy department is sponsoring a lecture on "The Concept of Character in Fiction" by William Gass, professor of philosophy of Purdue University at 8 p.m. Thursday in the EMU.

ANTONIO GAUDI will be the subject of a lecture presented by Robert Dvorak, assistant professor of architecture, at 4 p.m. Thursday in 106 Lawrence.

Mostly General

THE Department of Military Science at the University is accepting applications for a two-year Army Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) program. This program enables students to take the equivalent of the first two years of University ROTC in one six-week intensive training course during the summer between their sophomore and junior year.

TWO workshops in music education focusing on children in the elementary grade level will be offered by the University during the 1968 summer session. German music educator Wolfgang Longardt will teach both workshops.

Students will be able to enroll in both courses concurrently with each offering two hours of graduate credit. The tuition for each workshop is $31.

Further information may be obtained by writing to: Dean Robert M. Trotter, School of Music, University.

THREE University students have been named Woodrow Wilson Designates and are among some 1,124 being recommended by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation as "worthy of financial support in graduate school."

University designates and their major field of study are Linda Hoover, psychology, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hoover, Pendleton; Carrie Ireland, biochemistry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Ireland, Seattle, and Stuart Sargent, Chinese literature, Portland.

Art . . . ?

with people when the pianist started playing, but his piano produced no sound because all the strings had been removed. The "audience" kept looking at one another to see what they should do.

Two hours later the concert was over and everybody started applauding.

When the pianist was interviewed on TV the following day, he related the incident and added: "I wanted to see what the limits of human stupidity were. But it has no limits."

Andersen's story, I think, has a message for us. Our culture is waiting for an innocent little boy to tell us, sincerely and without hypocrisy, that so many modern works of art that are admired by the public are nothing but sham, phony and sick.

The saddest thing, however, is not the fact that we admire and accept sick art (literature, music, plays, movies), but that those who are intellectually sane remain voiceless on this matter. Is intellectual sanity perhaps sick, too?
