

BSU Revamps Structure; Establishes EMU Office

By DENNIS NELSON
Of the Emerald

The Black Student Union (BSU) opened their new office in a flurry of activity last week.

The BSU office grew out of the list of demands presented to University President Arthur Flemming in April. It serves as a co-ordinating center for Black students and as a center of communication for all students interested in activities of Black students and the BSU.

Members of the BSU are available to answer questions and offer aid to Black students in need of assistance at the University. A Speaker's Bureau has been established to provide speakers for campus and community activities. Persons wishing further information should go to room 15 of the EMU or call University extension 1984 or 1986.

Also last week the BSU elected new officers to serve during the coming year. Joinny Holloway was re-elected president and Art Jenkins was elected vice-president.

Six committees were established to better meet the demands being placed on the BSU. The Speaker's Bureau, Janies Barlow, chairman, will collect and research information on Black people, and provide a reading list for general information among BSU members. In addition they will attempt to provide speakers for interested organizations.

The Public Relations Committee, Rosie Noel, chairman, will communicate with other Black Student Unions, provide information to the community about BSU activities and work toward the goal of developing a Black press.

The Community Relations

Committee, Alfred Williamson, chairman, will attempt to involve the BSU in community and campus activities relating to goals in the interest of Black people.

The Athletic Committee, Larry Holiday chairman, will attempt to build a cohesive force involving all Black athletes and act as a grievance committee for Blacks to athletic departments.

The Academic Committee, Armando LaGuardia, chairman, will have the task of aiding incoming Black freshmen who need assistance with scheduling, tutoring and advising. The committee will also work to schedule curriculum and work toward the establishment of a School of Black Studies. Also this committee will handle scholarship duties, financial aid and in general all matters pertaining to academics for BSU members.

The Social Activities Committee, Phil Saunders, chairman, will work to implement activities for fund raising, aid out-of-town Blacks who are visiting the University and generally to form cohesive social units to go along with other activities of the BSU.

BSU members are optimistic about the role they will play next year in making the University a better place for Black students to study and live. They now have the facilities to accomplish this task and invite interested students to contact the BSU office for information and assistance.

Author Speaks For McCarthy

Leonard Lewin, free lance writer and author of the controversial book, "Report from Iron Mountain," will be at the University today campaigning for Senator Eugene McCarthy. He will speak at 3 p.m. in 370 Commonwealth.

He is also planning University appearances at the World Affairs Briefing Center at 12:30 and at a reception at Westminster House sponsored by Joan Acker at 4 p.m.

The book is controversial in that he claims it is a true report of the findings of a government commission and that these findings were suppressed. The committee's findings were, according to Lewin, that a lasting peace is not in the best interests of a stable society.

Lewin, who is also known under the pen name of L.L. Case, is editor of the anthology, "Treasury of American Humor."

The book, according to the Literary Guild, caused a "sensation in Washington" when it was first published anonymously.

Besides his University appearance which is being sponsored by the ASUO Speakers and Debates Bureau and the Students for McCarthy, Lewin will appear on the Dolf James radio show (station KORE) at 2 p.m.

McCarthy Campaigns In Oregon

Senator Eugene McCarthy (D-Minn.) will appear at the University, at 8 p.m. Friday in McArthur Court. His appearance marks the end of a School of Community Service and Public Affairs (CSPA) conference begun last week. He is sponsored by CSPA and the ASUO Speakers and Debates Agency.

McCarthy in Oregon

Hopeful Lauds State Staff

PORTLAND (AP)—"Unless I win here in Oregon, I'll have to blame myself," Sen. Eugene McCarthy told a crowd of several hundred partisans in the Lloyd Center mall Monday.

It was one of his several references in a brief Oregon visit to what he called the good condition of his organization in this state.

McCarthy, seeking the Democratic nomination in Oregon's May 28 presidential primary, said there had been many references to the ineptness of his organization. He said it took him only a little while Monday to determine that was not so here.

He was greeted by several hundred volunteers who jammed his headquarters in the old Elks Temple on Southwest 10th Avenue. He gave them a talk of encouragement, shook hands, then addressed the Portland Chamber of Commerce Members' Forum on the integrity of the institutions of government. He called the topic one of importance despite its lack of headline appeal.

He got applause at the end but in contrast to his talk two weeks ago to the Portland City Club, there was none punctuating his remarks as he went along.

A rally in the Lloyd Center mall came in an interval between showers and there was no need for the umbrellas that were spotted here and there.

A $25-a-head reception followed that before he headed for an evening meeting in San Francisco.

He returns Tuesday for more campaigning.

The names on the Democratic ballot are those of Kennedy, McCarthy and President Johnson. Humphrey's name is listed for vice-president and there has been some effort to persuade his backers to vote the Johnson-Humphrey slate as evidence of support for Humphrey for president.

Honorary Holds B.A. Day

By MARGARET CAMPBELL

Education Group Stages Sleep-in

Students from the School of Education held a sleep-in in the D. Busk Center of the education building Monday night.

They planned to meet with the education faculty at 8 a.m. today in the D. Busk area to present grievances against recent actions taken by the faculty, according to an anonymous spokesman.

The students did not wish to release their complaints to the press before the faculty was informed of them, "in fairness to the faculty." The spokesman expressed concern that publicity before the meeting might further damage relations with the students.

All members of the School of Education faculty were notified Monday of the meeting, according to the spokesman.

The students held meetings Monday night to prepare the list of grievances against the faculty, to be given at the Tuesday morning meeting.

Rockefeller & Reagan (RR) Express Richard Nixon Derailment Scheme

By DOUG ONYON
Of the Emerald

Editor's Note: This is the second in a five-part series on the five major announced candidates for President.

The Time Magazine dream ticket of Nelson Rockefeller and Ronald Reagan may soon become a reality.

Rockefeller said, following a meeting with the California governor Monday, "if you could get a ticket that reflects both points of view in the party, then it gives great strength."

It is this great strength that Rockefeller needs so badly now in his bid for the Presidency. Rockefeller, in his on-again, off-again campaign has chosen to go the same route as Hubert Humphrey: by-passing the primaries and wooing the state conventions.

With Reagan on his ticket the R&R team could just derail Nixon. Rockefeller, in the latest Gallup Poll, beats all three of the announced Democratic opponents by a larger margin than Richard Nixon.

Rockefeller is a long-time nemesis of Nixon's. In 1960, the New York Governor forced Nixon to adopt a modified platform in return for his support. The Governor also turned-down Nixon's offer for the vice presidency; a key factor in Nixon's eventual defeat.

With Rockefeller running so strongly in 1964, Nixon stayed clear of the Presidential race.

Rockefeller took a long time in making up his mind this campaign to challenge leading Nixon. Speaking on the primaries Rockefeller said, "I think I could have destroyed Dick in Oregon, and he would have destroyed me."

Dropping-out of the campaign in March, Rockefeller lost such strong supporters as Oregon Governor Tom McCall and Maryland Governor Siro Agnew. Agnew is now courting Nixon for the vice presidency.

At that time Rockefeller stated, "Quite frankly, I find it clear at this time that a considerable majority of the party's leaders want the candidacy of former Vice President Richard Nixon. I would like to reiterate unequivocally my non-candidacy."

What changed Rockefeller's mind in April was Thurston Morton, senator from Kentucky. Morton convinced Rockefeller that the Republicans should have a choice in 1968 and provide a forum for Republican issues.

The demise of President Johnson in the campaign also made Rockefeller re-evaluate his lust for the White House.

Appearing two years ago as a "hawk," Rockefeller has been gravitating towards a "dove" position. He now advocates self-determination for the South Vietnamese, even if they want to go Communist: "If that is what they want to do, that is their idea of freedom."

He has also said, "We're going to have to live with the Communists, but we want to live too, and they've got to recognize this."

On domestic issues Rockefeller's record in his state has been liberally oriented. During his tenure as Governor of New York he has increased aid to secondary and elementary schools by 170%, tripled the size of the state university system, inaugurated a $1 billion program to end water pollution, pushed through a $1.50 minimum wage, and proposed a $2.5 million program to modernize mass transportation.

This liberal approach to domestic issues and his "dove-like" stand in Vietnam produces a sharp contrast to that of Reagan's. But, Rockefeller, after their meeting Tuesday said there is no "ideology gulf" between them—a necessary statement if Rockefeller wants to win the Republican nomination.
