Chairman of the Board of the First National Bank. His real work as a revolutionist was Reed College, which he built almost singlehanded and which he served as President.

3. The establishment, the real power system of Oregon, is not wealth or family but is a coalition of brains and intelligence with the overall goal in time to come of not merely getting one up on Harvard or New England or even the other 49 states but, naturally, the entire world. The tools of the establishment are intrigue, conspiracy, and gamesmanship. Contrary to the popular notion, Douglas fir and farming are not the main industries of Oregon. The main industry of Oregon is conspiracy and intrigue. This may be illustrated by Sen. Morse, who kept Oregon one up on the republic for several terms. His retirement, insofar as the establishment is concerned, was arranged in order to take Packwood, a young man, and train him up.

4. For the better part of University's history the establishment has always had a competent leader. Such was Prince Lucien Campbell, who ran it quite well. When President Campbell died E. B. McNaughton took over. Most establishment members are considering handing McNaughton's job over to Tom McCall if McCall can get politics out of his system.

The establishment, then, is primarily revolutionary and subversive in character and is currently having the time of its life matching wits with SDS which for all this latter groups morbid interest in scatology and ex - crement may yet turn into something interesting.

The current view within the establishment concerning SDS is that merely being first in scatology need not necessarily qualify SDS for full membership in the establishment; still, you never know. The establishment is currently shorthanded and, since McNaughton's death, without leadership. Hence there is a debate as to whether or not to let SDS in. This is still in progress.

The establishment will never know whether the effort this last century has been worth the trouble and will probably not know for another 200 or 300 years. In the meantime and at present the common view is to carry on and determine whether or not it can learn anything from SDS.

Museum Exhibits Epstein Bronzes

The Museum of Art at the University has announced an exhibition of six bronze portrait sculptures by Sir Jacob Epstein which will be on extended loan through November of 1969.

The sculptures are on display in the south mezzanine gallery of the museum.

Beside his portrait bronzes, which are universally acknowledged to exhibit a rare and remarkable sensitivity to character, Epstein did watercolors, portrait drawings, and studies. In later years he was commissioned to do monumental works for many public buildings and portraits of the British royalty.

Two of the portraits at the museum depict members of the Epstein family: "Kitty," his second daughter, who was one of his favorite models because of their close understanding, and "Bamy Anne (Freud)", Kitty's child, who has the distinction of being descended both from Jacob Epstein and Sigmund Freud.

Also on display are Epstein's "Ninth Duke of Marlborough," "The Girl From Senegal," "Oriel Ross," and "Professor Blackett."

Hours at the museum are Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m., and closed all day Monday.

Maya Talk to Begin Museum Programs

George Andrews, professor of architecture at the University, will give a series of four talks at the museum of art. His first talk will be on "Maya Civilization" at 3 p.m. next Sunday.

In addition to the talk, slides will be shown of Maya sculpture and painting and a small exhibit of drawings and photographs collected during his several expeditions.

Andrews is completing a ten-year project aimed at identifying the way Mayan cities were organized in Mexico, Guatemala and Honduras.

The three remaining lectures will include "South Pacific Plants and People," Jan. 26; "The Way of the Pilgrims in the Orient," Feb. 9; and "The Greeks in India," Feb. 23. All of the programs are open to the public free of charge under the sponsorship of the Friends of the Museum.

freedoms has been hinted at in previous months by both the public and members of the legislature.

"I don't expect that," Johnson said. "The history of Oregon is all against that sort of thing. The state has a very good record on allowing the universities freedom."

At this time, it is unknown when appropriations to Oregon Higher Institutions of Learning will be before the legislature.

Other major issues facing the legislature are as follows:

- Four per cent sales tax—Gov. McCall wants to enact four per cent sales tax to provide property tax relief for Oregon home owners, while maintaining the same level of tax money paid to the state. McCall wants this issue put before the public in a special election this spring.

At this time, the Republicans have enough votes to pass this bill. However, whether the legislature will move fast enough to have it placed before the public this spring is not definite.

- Buy ocean property — McCall has proposed that highway bonds be issued to buy ocean beach property. This measure was put on the ballot in November but failed by a heavy majority.
- Reorganizing Oregon state agencies—McCall has proposed a change in the structure of state government. He wishes to merge several government agencies ino one agency and add new additions.
- Election law reform —Proposals to limit political campaign contributions will also be considered by the legislature.

Today, McCall will address the legislature, presenting them with the program he is calling for in the next year. Committee assignments will also be made for the legislatures.

E. D. Potts, Grants Pass Democrat, won a second term Sunday night as president of the Oregon Senate.

He had the votes of the 14 Republicans and the other two conservative Democrats. The 13 liberal Democrats opposed him.

He is the first in this century to be re-elected president of the state Senate.

Robert Smith, a Republican from Burns, will serve as House Speaker.

Police hold man in coed slashing

A Springfield man was arrested Saturday and charged with the knife assault of a University coed near the campus earlier this week.

Held in lieu of $6,000 bail is George Gwyn, 26, of 4580 Aster Street, Springfield. Gwyn is charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, assault with intent to commit rape, and with larceny in a building.

It was the last charge which led to Gwyn's arrest. A woman reported the theft of her purse from a laundromat early Saturday and Gwyn, found nearby, was arrested. Questioning led to the assault charges, Police Sgt. D. L. Lonnicker said.

The coed in question, Pamela Root, 22, a graduate student from Bremerton, Wash., had been grabbed Monday night as she walked near the campus. Her throat was cut when she yelled and broke free of her assailant's grip.

Gwyn is scheduled to be arraigned on the three charges in Lane County District Court this morning.
