Agnew says U.S. Winger-Alpert won't withdraw

TULSA, Okla. AP - The United States will not withdraw unilaterally from South Vietnam, Vice President Spiro Agnew said Friday.

Agnew addressed a cheering crowd of 3,000 at a $10 a plate fund raising dinner for the Oklahoma Republican party.

In discussing recent events in Vietnam, the vice president said a unilateral withdrawal would not be in the "ultimate interests" of the nation.

Agnew also said peace demonstrations had delayed the end of the Vietnam war by giving the enemy "the impression that this country is weak and divided and ready to fall."

"In my judgment, the war in Vietnam would be over today," he said, "if we could simply stop the demonstrations in the streets in the United States."

The former Maryland governor called for an end to disorder on college campuses and said the United States is not ready to run up the "white flag" and surrender to totalitarian forces inside or outside the country.

"The best thing to do with student rioters is to run them through a car wash," he said.

Agnew left immediately after his speech for Key Biscayne, Fla., to confer with the President.

someone they'd like to help out if you need it."

They both see a problem with the frustrations developed from student government.

"My involvement in student government," Winger said, "has been very lengthy and a lot of my friends have dropped out. I've resigned from the Senate twice, but they've never accepted it."

"It's easy to quit things, but to stand up and try to change things is much harder."

Alpert said one of the major problems is that concerned students see the problems in society and become frustrated with working within the system, then something happens like the expulsion of the navy recruiters from the EMU.

"What these people have to realize," Alpert explained, "is that they are doing more harm to what they are trying to achieve. You must mobilize the silent majority to make changes."

When demonstrations arise on campus, Alpert said, "You have two conflicting things. You want to keep order on campus and not let a few impose their way on everyone, but, on the other hand, you have the tradition of free speech at the University and as a forum for all ideas."

"You have to weigh these. I think the line is drawn when someone disrupts a process that someone else is entitled to enjoy."

Winger added, "The student body president must look for other channels to channel people to goals they want. We'd like to steal the thunder of the people with legitimate gripes and work with them through the system."

Both are also concerned with influencing the legislature. Winger said, "The legislature is not even responding to what is happening here. They are worried about what is happening to the rest of the nation."

"It tarnishes our image by suggesting something might happen here."

Winger also said he has realized "ideological differences aren't that important. You can get through to the person himself."

JR. CLASS PRESIDENT

For love and money.

You can fly.
As a TWA hostess.
And you know what that means.
None of that 9 to 5 jazz, first of all. Good coin, second of all. And third of all, lots of time off to do what you want to do.
And as an added option at no extra cost, we'll throw in a chance for you to fall in love.
With all the people you'll meet. Or all the fantastic places all over the world you can go on TWA.
Depending on the temperament of your boyfriend, of course.

the date: May 13
the place: Benson Hotel
the time: 12:00 noon—8:00 p.m.
the non-ogre interviewer:
Jan Gormley

Make a decision. We probably won't be here again this year.

P.S. If you're interested in applying for a summer hostess job, come in and we'll talk it over (minimum age 20, completing junior year).
