By ROBIN ROY
Of the Emerald

In its last meeting of the year the Senate Thursday night:

- Approved the election of Kip Morgan and Sonja Sweek as ASUO president and vice-president respectively. The two were installed after two hours of discussion and at least five votes concerning approval of presidential election results. Outgoing ASUO president, Dick Jones, installed Morgan and Sweek and received a standing ovation after his speech.

The debate ended when a motion established a hearing would take place on alleged violations of ASUO election rules by Morgan and Sweek. (See story, page 3).

- Installed the 15 newly elected ASUO senators.

- Re-elected Senator Bob Winger to the post of Senate president. Winger opposed Morgan at the recent ASUO elections.

- Discussed the matter of Morris Yarowsky, visiting assistant professor of art. Charles Johnson, acting University president, and Charles Duncan, dean of faculties, appeared before the body to discuss the situation and to talk about the visiting professor program which is included in the Senate-passed ASUO incidental fees budget. No commitment was made on either subject.

- Passed a resolution condemning the state legislative bill to increase out-of-state tuition.
- Approved 17 committee appointments.

The body was still discussing National Student Associations representatives at press time. Three bills were before the Senate but had not been debated or acted upon.

SEN. AL FLEGEL
Supports HB 1880

Senators pass bill on campus disruption

By MATT McCORMICK
Of the Emerald

SALEM (Special)—A revised version of HB 1880 received the formal approval of the Oregon Senate Thursday with a 24-6 vote.

The bill gives the governor the authority to declare a state of emergency when "a clear and present danger exists to any public property." The revised bill includes all public lands. It also requires the governor to consult with the public official or other official in charge of the property involved.

The original draft of the bill that was passed by the House with unusual speed two weeks ago only gave the governor power to bar persons from state college campuses.

The vote came after approximately 15 minutes of discussion. Sen. Al Flegel, D-Douglas, said, "This bill bears little resemblance to the one given to us by the other chamber. I feel we have written a good public trespass law."

He went on to say that he didn't think the bill was a "cops on campus" measure.

Sen. Vernon Cook, D-Multnomah, said the bill was unconstitutional because it excluded people from public property without due process.

Flegel pointed out the bill provided for an immediate court review of any action taken to bar a person from a public place.

Senators voting against the bill in the Senate Thursday were: Cook, Ed Fadeley, D-Lane; Ted Hallock, D-Multnomah; Berkeley Lent, D-Multnomah; Betty Roberts, D-Multnomah; and Glenn Stadler, D-Lane.

Other bills affecting higher education are:

- HB 2040, which provides the budget for the coming biennium for the state system of higher education. It will be voted on by the Senate today, and passage is expected.

- HB 2201, which provides for $38 million for capital construction of school buildings. It is also to be voted on by the Senate today.

- HB 1412, which would reorganize the parking and traffic violation procedures for institutions under the State Board of Higher Education. The Senate will vote on it today.

- HB 1827, the "super-board" bill, which would put all education from kindergarten to college in the state under a single board, instead of the present system of three separate boards. The bill is still being considered by the Senate Education Committee.

- SB 539, which would provide for the building of a dome stadium in the Willamette Valley. The bill apparently has also died in committee.

The Legislature hopes to close the session by this evening.

Request made by Morgan

Student Services review asked

By ANNE PARSONS
Of the Emerald

Kip Morgan, newly elected ASUO President, said one of the first things he is going to do is to ask Acting University President Charles Johnson to set up an ad hoc committee to review the Office of Student Services.

"Although it does serve certain necessary functions," Morgan said, "it isn't reflecting the needs of the students."

The Office of Student Services is coordinated by Dean of Students Donald Dushane. Its departments occupy most of Emerald Hall and much of Susan Campbell Hall.

"From the time a student first expresses an interest in coming to the University, we're concerned about him," Dushane said.

The services are:
Office of Admissions, Registrar's Office, Placement Service, Financial Aids Office, which Dushane described as "the fastest growing section of the services," Office of the Graduate Student Advisor, Office of Student Services Research, Student Conduct Office, Counseling Center, International Students Office, Offices of the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women.

Morgan said his concern over the student services office relates to his concern over the lack of adequate student participation in University decision-making bodies.

"I want to restore the priorities to the student.

"The Office of Student Services is supposed to serve students. It must have a student voice," Morgan said. "Who understands students better than students?"

Some of Morgan's ideas were presented to staff members of the Office of Student Services.

Dushane said some students are paid members of his staff.

He pointed out that the Minor Court Advisor, the student defender and the student prosecutor are students.

He also said the assistants to the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women are often students.

It is these offices which specifically concern Morgan.

Acting Dean of Men Larry Large said there is a definite communication gap between his office and the ASUO President's office.

"It's because we're a new office with an old image," he said.

"Since we no longer have the function of discipline, our function is that of providing general services to students whenever they think they need us."

Dean of Women Shirley Wilson said, "We don't want to impose our services on anyone, but we hope that all students will feel free to use us."

Large said, "We are a sort of buffer between the faculty and the students and vice versa. We have access to valuable knowledge which the student does not.

"We are, in fact, the student's advocate when he comes before the scholastic deficiencies committee," Large continued.

Morgan said he feels the office of the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women are giving "proportionately unfair amounts of time to certain group of people, such as fraternities and sororities."

Miss Wilson said, "We're concerned about that and we don't want that to be true."

She said two assistant deans of students, John English and Bunny Nosler, act as links to the fraternities and sororities.

"We did a study on how much of the assistants' working day was spent on this business and we figured that it averages about 20 per cent," Miss Wilson said.

Another of Morgan's suggestions is that fewer people could handle the work load of the office.

He said associate professor of history Stanley Pierson is proposing to the Faculty-Student Council that the position of Dean of Undergraduate Studies be created. He suggested the creation of this office might eliminate the need for the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women.

Dushane said he had not heard of Pierson's proposal.

"I would assume it would be an extension of the Office of Undergraduate Advising," he said. "I don't think this would cause any changes in the present structure of the Office of Student Services."
