WASHINGTON (CPS) — Recent protests on at least six campuses have been directed against corporations, particularly the General Electric Company. Some 150,000 workers are currently striking G.E. for increased wages and fringe benefits.

At San Jose State College, about 25 student members of the Radical Action Movement (RAM) a wing of SDS, clashed with 70 police who attempted to block the students' access to a room in the College Union Building where industrial recruiters were stationed.

Sixty companies were represented by recruiters on campus, including Lockheed, General Dynamics and General Electric, the nation's top three defense contractors.

The students marched on the recruiters chanting "Smash imperialism" and "Recruiters off campus." They were stopped at

Student tuition hike subject of resolution

The ASUO Higher Education Committee will present resolutions to the ASUO Senate in response to the recent State Board of Higher Education raise in student tuition and housing rates.

The resolutions will enable student representatives to voice their opinions concerning the ascending trend in costs of higher education.

The committee also discussed the recent ASUO presidential veto of the Inter-institutional Union of Students of the Oregon State System of Higher Education Senate's (IUSOSSHE) constitution ratification with ASUO administrative assistant Mike Kment.

Kment told the group that referenda concerning the union would be included by the ASUO in the upcoming general election.

The higher education committee discussed student appointments for the University self-study committee, but postponed final nominations for committee membership until its meeting next Tuesday.

Anderson convicted of concealing weapon

Howard Anderson, 24-year-old Eugene Black Panther, was convicted Thursday of carrying a concealed weapon in his car. He was fined $75 plus $5 in court costs.

The .38 calibre pistol was ordered confiscated by District Judge William Beckett.

Anderson's attorney, Kenneth Morrow, served oral notice of appeal of conviction because a defense witness failed to appear.

the door of the recruiters' room by a small force of plainclothesmen and campus guards and were ordered to disperse.

When they did not, about 50 helmeted San Jose police joined the other law enforcement personnel in pushing the demonstrators out of the area. Fourteen were arrested and charged with misdemeanors under a recently-passed provision in state laws prohibiting student disruption.

At Boston University, the G.E. issue caused two outbreaks in as many weeks. Twenty-four were arrested when a group of protesters tried to disrupt a seminar attended by a G.E. executive. Students demanded that the university handle all medical and legal problems resulting from the incident, but the university refused to do more than provide bail money on a loan basis. It also refused to comply with a demand that all G.E. officials be banned from campus.

Building occupied

Then approximately 50 members of SDS occupied the administration building to protest the school's complicity with G.E. They held the building for 16 hours despite a court injunction against such action. Six were cited for contempt of the court order.

At the University of Iowa, the administration has announced it will discipline students who attempted to remove U.S. Department of Labor recruiter from the school's placement office last month. The students were protesting what they called the Labor Department's support of the G.E. management against strikers. Civil charges will be brought against non-students involved in the incident.
