Positions open for SPI board

There are openings for upper-division or graduate students, preferably with a liberal arts background, on the Board of Directors of Student Projects, Inc., the ASUO's non-profit corporation.

According to Waiker Edens, President of the organization, anyone interested in a position on the board should contact him at phone extension 3729 or room 309 EMU. ASUO President Ron Eachus will make the final decision on appointments.

A member of the Board of Directors is expected to attend monthly policy-making meetings, contributing ideas for new projects, Edens said. Projects already planned for this academic year include creating a student marketing division, setting up concessions at University events and publishing Footnotes, the class lecture notes.

New board members will not be tied down to administering previously conceived projects, however; they will be encouraged to come up with "new, creative approaches," he said. "This is a good opportunity for students to get work experience with a bonafide enterprise."

Edens said Student Projects, Inc. has had a growth rate of 105 per cent since its inception and he anticipates the organization's various projects will bring in $45,000 this year. The profits will be used to subsidize other ASUO programs. Board members will earn an honorarium for their service, the amount of which is yet to be determined.

Old Oregon editor joins journalism faculty

Kenneth Metzler, editor of the University alumni magazine, Old Oregon, has been appointed to a full-time position in the University's School of Journalism.

Stanford Bettis has been named editor of Old Oregon. He has been associate editor since 1969.

The changes in appointments will be effective Jan. 1, 1970, according to Ray Hawk, dean of administration and director of University Relations.

Metzler has been serving on the Journalism School faculty on a part-time basis since 1967. He teaches courses in magazine editing and magazine article writing. His teaching duties, as an assistant professor, will now be expanded, Hawk said.

Under Metzler's editorship, Old Oregon has won a number of national awards for excellence among alumni publications.

Currently, Metzler is working on a biography of the late Charles Johnson, acting president of the University from 1968-69.

Bettis has been associate editor of Old Oregon since 1969. Prior to that he had been a free-lance journalist-photographer and publications consultant in Eugene since 1964.

In announcing the appointments, Dean Hawk said that as editor of Old Oregon, Bettis would have the additional responsibility of producing the University's faculty-staff News Bulletin, and of planning several other publications including a quarterly University calendar.
