Doctoral candidate receives fellowship

A University doctoral candidate in sociology, Riley Dunlap, has been awarded a year's fellowship from Resources for the Future Inc. RFF of Washington, D.C.

It is a doctoral dissertation fellowship, one of approximately ten offered yearly by RFF to students in the social sciences whose dissertations are somehow related to natural resources. Dunlap is studying the factors affecting the way various individuals or segments of the population reach decisions on environmental issues.

Dunlap is a graduate of San Francisco State College and received his master's degree in sociology at the University in 1969.

Voter's press conference scheduled

A 10:30 a.m. press conference today will kick off the Voters for Peace campaign at the University. It will be held at the Chi Psi fraternity house, 1018 Hilyard St.

According to co-chairmen David Lichtman and Lester Fordham, Voters for Peace is an organization for newly enfranchised voters, 18 to 21 years of age. Supporters are asked to sign pledge cards promising to vote for political candidates favoring immediate withdrawal from Indochina. A second part of the pledge asks Congress to exercise their authority over defense funds.

Persons wishing to sign the pledge cards may do so until April 27. Tables will be placed on the EMU Terrace and at Commonwealth Hall. Teams of Voters for Peace workers will also be handing out cards in dormitories, fraternities and sororities.

At the conclusion of the Eugene campaign, the pledge cards will be sent to state headquarters at Lewis and Clark College and eventually to Washington, D.C.

Sculpture students to show work

Sculpture students from the University as well as PSU, OSU and the Portland Art Museum School have been asked to show representative works of sculpture at the main offices of the U.S. National Bank in Portland.

Each school will select four or five works for the show May 1 through 12.

Anti-war activities discussed

Tentative anti-war activities for May Day were discussed Monday by the May Day Committee (MDC) of the Student Union, chaired by University student Joe Enzensperger.

In conjunction with plans being formulated by various local anti-war groups, including the Eugene Committee To End the War Now, MDC plans to have two marches leading to the Mall, one originating on campus, the other at the fairgrounds.

The marches would kick off an afternoon of speeches and film showings. Committee members suggested at a Monday meeting inviting Eugene City Councilwoman Wickes Beal to address the gathering. "Time Is Running Out," an anti-war film belonging to the Student Union was also considered for the agenda.

Other suggestions included a picnic dinner at Skinner's Butte Park and a street dance on the Mall in the evening. "If we don't put something together, it's doubtful that anyone else will," said Enzensperger.

The committee debated on the mood which May Day activities should convey, mentioning a serious, sincere prelude to other anti-war May actions, or a festive celebration of the traditional international working class holiday. Of prime concern to the committee was how to attract Eugene's working residents who ordinarily do not participate in rallies and marches.

A roster of anti-war activities includes:

April 22—Vietnam Veterans to stage a five-day vigil in Washington D.C.

April 24—mass demonstrations scheduled for San Francisco and Washington.

May 1—Peopel's Peace Treaty presented to President Nixon.

May 2—celebration of May Day, worker's holiday, peace treaty, etc.

May 3—providing President Nixon takes no action on the treaty, massive civil disobedience planned for Washington.

May 4 and 5—civil disobedience to continue.

KWAX, dancers, musicians request additional funds

The Fiscal Affairs Committee began its second round of hearings Monday afternoon by listening briefly to testimony from the University's Repertory Dancers, KWAX and the Eugene-University Music Association (EUMA).

More than 20 members of the Repertory Dancers group filled the hearing room to lend support to their organization's budget request.

The dancer's request of a $825 increase over last year's budget of $2000 would enable them to attend more workshops and concerts. One member told the committee that the group wasn't able to fulfill all the requests they received to perform because of a lack of traveling funds. Most of the money they receive goes for traveling expenses.

KWAX receives its major source of funds from voluntary contributors, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and the Division of Broadcast Services but they have requested ASUO support funds for what they term "unique needs which otherwise would have been deferred."

KWAX requested $432.50 more than last year's budget request of $2189. Representatives said they would like to use the money to develop an international folk and ethnic music library, to buy a new piece of equipment, and to produce a program guide and for paid advertising.

EUMA is a cooperative arrangement between the association and the University which presents a series of six concerts a year in Eugene. The University provides McArthur Court and helps with a fee for all students who want to attend; the association provides the concerts.

Last year, the committee was told, the University paid the association a fee totaling 25 cents per student amounting to $3900.

It was suggested at Monday's hearing that, since student interest in this program isn't as popular as it once was, the University purchase 1200 series tickets at $4 a piece and pass them out on a first come first serve basis to students upon presentation of a student body card.

This would put the cost at $900 over last year's budget but it would give the ASUO some indication of how many students participate in this program so that future budgets can be regulated accordingly.

Student attendance at the concerts this year has ranged from 400 to 1000. Under the new program, spouse tickets could be purchased for $1.

The Outdoor Program and the Survival Center also presented budgets for the consideration of the Fiscal Committee.

Last year the budget of the Outdoor Program totalled $3,800, $85 dollars less than the budget submitted for approval for next year.

In the April 6 Emerald, a schedule of the Fiscal Committee hearings was printed but since that time a rescheduling took place. The new schedule of public hearings, their time and locations are:

Deserter transferred to Fort Lewis; Seattle attorney assigned to case

Chester John Olenec Jr.—the Army deserter who surrendered to Eugene police after his friends sponsored a Saturday rally and farewell ceremony on his behalf—has been turned over to Army authorities and transferred to the stockade at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Olenec, 24, ended three and one-half years of running as a deserter when he walked into the Eugene Police Dept. Saturday afternoon.

Court martial papers are expected to be filed soon and the military equivalent of an arraignment will follow, Charles Porter, Olenec's Eugene attorney, said.

Porter said arrangements had been made for William Hanson, a Seattle attorney, to serve as Olenec's counsel at Fort Lewis.

The Eugene attorney also said Olenec might not be charged with desertion because the military must show an intent to stay away permanently before that charge can be proven. He said he expects Olenec to be charged with being absent without leave.

Olenec had told some 400 persons Saturday that he had begun running after receiving orders to fight in Vietnam.

He said he was on a 30-day leave after receiving orders sending him to Vietnam when he decided he could not obey the orders. He then began his three years of running, the last two of which have centered around the Eugene area.

Olenec had helped set up a rug store on Willamette St. and was working as a stained glass craftsman up until this weekend.

He told the persons who came to see him off Saturday that he would return to the Eugene area when his difficulties with the Army are resolved.
