Education workshop set

Leaders in local education associations may attend a University 1971 Summer Session workshop conducted by Dr. Ray Hull of the University College of Education and staff members and officers of both the Oregon Education Association and the national association.

The workshop, scheduled for June 14-25 will explore the roles of professional organizations in improving public education, analyze the resources available through such organizations, and outline the responsibilities of educators in developing professional leadership.

Participants will be housed in the Bean Hall dormitory complex, which is used exclusively for adult conference groups during the summer. All lectures and discussions will be held in the dormitory conference rooms.

Tuition for the workshop, which offers three hours of graduate credit, is $51, exclusive of costs for room and meals. Inquiries may be addressed to Dr. Ray Hull, College of Education, University of Oregon, Eugene, Oregon 97403.

Geography students plan trip

Eighteen University geography students will spend a week this summer at the Malheur Environmental Field Station to get a firsthand look at the Harney Basin and Steens Mountain area.

This is the first year the course, titled Field Study of Southeastern Oregon, has been offered, according to Dr. Gene Martin, head of the University geography department. It will concentrate on observation and study of landforms, settlement patterns and environmental problems in the area, and will last from August 15 through 21.

The Malheur Environmental Field Station is located at the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge, 32 miles south of Burns. Geologically, the Station is near one of the newest lava flows in Oregon, the 400-year-old Diamond Crater. A number of fossil sites and diverse geological formations are within driving distance of the Station.

Fees for the week-long field study course will be $41 for students enrolled in the University Summer Session, or $75 for those enrolling only in this course. Transportation is included in the fee, and provisions for food and lodging is being made at the Field Station at an estimated cost of $25 per person for the week.

The course carries two hours of academic credit at the University, and will be limited to 18 students. Applications and information are available from Elton Bentley in the University Geography Department, Eugene.

The public is invited without charge.

Armsbury guilt upheld by court

The conviction of Charles Armsbury, former University teaching assistant, on illegal possession of a sawed-off shotgun has been upheld by the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

Armsbury, 28, a former Eugene Patriot party leader and candidate for mayor of Eugene, was arrested February of last year by Eugene police. A sawed-off shotgun was found in his possession. He is now serving two concurrent 10-year sentences at McNeil Island Federal Penitentiary near Tacoma, Washington.

Armsbury was also denied his third request to be released on bail while appealing his conviction.

The Oregon Daily Emerald is published Monday through Friday during school year, except during exam and vacation periods. Twice weekly during 8-week summer session; once weekly during 3-week summer session; by the Publications Board of the University of Oregon.

Second class postage paid at Eugene, Oregon 97403. Subscription rates $10 per year, $9.00 academic year, $2.50 per term.

80 report to center for meningitis treatment

The spinal meningitis case of Judy Madden has prompted approximately 80 University students to go to the health center for preventative antibiotics.

Miss Madden was stricken with the disease almost two weeks ago. She was listed in fair condition Tuesday in Sacred Heart General Hospital. Miss Madden was admitted to the hospital April 8 in serious condition.

Officials requested that students who had come in contact with Miss Madden come to the student health center for preventative antibiotics. According to Dr. Avard Long, head of the health center, some 80 students have shown up.

Long also commented he has received no reports of cases of spinal meningitis since Miss Madden was stricken.
