On Campus

Alaskan wilderness film tonight

"A Day in the Sun," the film of the life of a family in the Alaskan wilderness above the Arctic circle, will be shown by the Outdoor Program and the Survival Center at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the EMU ballroom. Admission is 50 cents.

Fred and Elaine Meader, the subjects of the film, will narrate the feature-length, color-sound film and discuss their wilderness experiences following its showing.

The public is invited to meet the Meaders earlier, at a free coffee "hour" from 4 to 6 p.m. today at Koinonia House, 1414 Kincaid.

Parking rules changed

In order to make the campus more accessible to students using the libraries and other campus facilities in the evenings, the parking subcommittee of the Campus Planning Committee has waived the parking sticker requirement in all parking lots from 5 p.m. until 7 a.m. on week days. Exceptions to this schedule are the reserved and disabled parking spaces in all lots and the entire Kincaid Street lot (Lot No. 16) which will continue to require permit stickers 24 hours a day.

All lots will provide open parking all day on weekends with the same exceptions. All no-permit parking will be on a first-come, first served basis.

Bogen, Bowlin leave for councils

Vice President for Student Services Gerald Bogen and Dean of Student Personnel Services Robert Bowlin will be out of town this week.

Bogen and Bowlin will leave today for a meeting of the Pacific-8 Deans' Council in Berkeley, Calif., and later in the week they will attend a meeting of the Western College Deans' Council in San Jose, Calif. Both will return to campus Monday.

German program to hold reception

The University's Overseas Study Program in Germany will be holding a reception for interested students at 4 p.m. today in Gerlinger Lounge. The German Study Program is a liberal arts program in Stuttgart, Germany and is open to University students.

Under the "Stuttgart Program" a student can study for one year in Germany without loss of credit. Sponsored by the Oregon State System of Higher Education, the Oregon Study Center in Germany makes it possible for an undergraduate student to gain educational experience and still have all his credit hours taken in Germany apply to his bachelor's degree at the University.

To be eligible, a student must have had two years of college German or its equivalent and have at least junior standing. Graduate students are also welcome to participate.

Costs for the resident undergraduate, exclusive of transportation, amount to $2,430. This sum includes four weeks of intensive language instruction before classes begin.

For additional information students should contact professor McWilliams in the German department.

Students' art work to be shown

Gareth Goodger-Hill, a Canadian graduate student in photography at the University, is currently featured in a one man photography show at the Koinonia Center of the Cooperative Christian Ministry (CCM). Goodger-Hill's showing is part of a new program being initiated by the CCM.

Being shown along with Goodger-Hill's photographs, is a group of lithographs done by members of a University print making class and arranged by Ken Paul. Paintings by David Moscher and Pat McGill are being shown at the Wesley Center.

All of the works which will be shown at the Koinonia Center and the Wesley Center will be on sale. The Dove's Eye, upstairs in the Koinonia Center, will sell student made posters.

A major showing of paintings will begin at the end of January. The paintings have been done by University students, and will be arranged by Tom Cappuccino of the University art department.

Persons interested in showing their work should contact Garry Young at 686-3597 or come to Koinonia Center.

The Koinonia Center is located at 1414 Kincaid and is open until 5 p.m. daily. The Wesley Center, 1236 Kincaid, is open daily and evenings.

OSPIRG sponsors energy study

An OSPIRG meeting regarding a study of "Energy and Power in the Pacific Northwest" will meet at 12:30 p.m. today in the EMU. Students interested in being a part of this study but unable to attend the meeting, should call the new environmental Studies Center (x3516) and leave their name.
