Crucial series with Huskies confronts Ducks

Good grief. What happens if Oregon's baseball team whips Washington three times this weekend?

If the Ducks sweep this Northern Division Pacific-8 series, that means they're 7-2 in the conference—and in the driver's seat for the title.

Only one problem. Winner of the mud and rain division has to go to California and play either USC, Stanford, Cal, or UCLA. Some honor. Those people play more games in a week than Oregon can slosh through in a season.

Coach Mel Krause will tackle that problem when he comes to it, however. Right now it's Oregon's ace righty against the Huskies.

Washington gets Hardin this afternoon at 3 p.m. The crafty Duck righthander, owner of a deceptive 3-2 record and 2.45 ERA, pitched two shutout innings against Portland in his last start.

Bob Claydon (2-0, 2.30) and Mike Shoup (2-0, 4.03) stake their unblemished marks against the Huskies in a doubleheader which starts 1 p.m. Saturday.

At the plate, the Ducks should be able to count on Greg Brosterhous, Bob Anderson and Dave Roberts for plenty of firepower.

Brosterhous apparently saves everything for conference games—he's ripping league pitchers for a .467 average and 10 RBIs. Roberts has slugged eight homers, and is hitting .318 in loop games.

Anderson, who manages to get to first more than any Duck, is hitting .313 in the conference.

Claydon whipped Oregon State in his last start 7-1, while Shoup blanked the Beavers 14-0 on a three-hitter his last time out.

The Huskies are 1-2 in Northern Division play, losing a series to Washington State.
