

You name it, the main desk either has it or can tell you where to get it . . . candy, magazines, information, check cashing, papers, cigars, greeting cards, books, tickets and classified ads for the Daily Emerald are just a few of the items sold by this busy, busy place. If you can't find it, just ask one of the friendly clerks.

The United States Post Office leases space in the EMU to better serve the University community. It's located in the north end of the building near public telephones and the browsing and meeting rooms.

If your new school shoes pinch just a little, you can come into the lounging area just to the left of the main doors, kick them off and heave a sigh of relief. Sit and relax as long as you like. A good place to sit and wonder what the other guy is thinking.

Sun worshipers have their day, too, when they use the patio located in the center of activities on the main floor. It's pleasant to eat your lunch outside on warm days, but if you don't care for a fan you can sit on the inside and look out at those who do.

Few "regulars" know it by its name, but the dining area nearest the cafeteria is called the annex. Whatever you call it, it's yours to use and enjoy.

It's mighty handy to have a Xerox machine so close to the center of activities as this one located right outside the door to the main desk.
