

Quiet, relaxing coast only an hour away

Southern California. The water is cold and you either have to have a wet suit, be oblivious to the cold or be numb in order to do much swimming. There are, however, beautiful lengths of beach to walk along and lots of driftwood to search through. There are lengths of cliffs, such as those near the Sea Lion Caves above Florence, that drop down to the ocean and are just for sight-seers.

Some people try surfing on the coast, but this is difficult, because of the rocky nature of the coast line, the undertow and the small waves.

There are some other interesting things to do on the coast. There is the 64-mile Jet Boat ride on the Rogue River leaving from Gold Beach. Some of the hydro-jet boats carry mail up the Rogue as boats have been doing since 1895 and pass through some river scenery which is not accessible by car.

For those who like observing sea animals there are the Undersea Gardens and the Depoe Bay Aquarium, which offer a view of different kinds of animals in natural habitats.

There are the Oregon State University Marine Science Center at Newport and the University Marine Center at Charleston for those who wish to do some heavy marine animal and plant life studying.

There are the Sea Lion Caves, which are open all year and offer a view into a 1500 foot cavern home of Steller Sea Lions.

Bandon, Coos Bay, Reedsport and Tillamook are noted for their cheese factories and offer tours through the factories and samples of the various cheeses made.

The Oregon coast also offers a variety of lodgings, from a quiet, private piece of beach, you hike into, to the state parks and the various luxury inns and lodges, such as Salishan at Gleneden Beach, the Inn at Otter Crest at Otter Rock and the Inn at Spanish Head in Lincoln City.

A trip to the coast takes about an hour and fifteen minutes from Eugene to Florence and can be whatever the individual wants it to be. It can be an expensive tour down the coast or a quiet, relaxing self-analyzing time.

It is up to the individual to find what he likes and nearly everything offered on any other stretch of coast is offered here—along with the unique things found only on the Oregon Coast.

across the dunes is above Honeyman many people walk the three-quarters of a mile to enjoy the privacy of the long expanse of beach.

The Dunes National Recreation Area was enacted in March of '72 by the United States Congress, according to Jim Lyne, assistant recreation staff officer for the Siuslaw National Forest. It "has some of the largest dunes on the Pacific Coast and there are fresh water lakes," Lyne said.

The Recreation Area stretches along almost 50 miles of beach from the mouth of the Siuslaw River almost all the way to Coos Bay, according to Lyne. A Recreation Area is something that the Congress believes to be of national significance, according to Lyne.
