

Straub bids too high; rejected

Six construction firms have turned in bids for the first phase of the remodeling of Straub Hall at the University.

The apparent low bidder for direct construction, at $258,627, was more than $11,000 higher than the total project budget of $247,500 approved by the Emergency Board.

"It appears likely that the bids will be rejected," said Jack

Hunderup, vice chancellor for planning in the State System of Higher Education, "and that the scope of the work will be reduced in order to come within the budgeted amount."

Firms bid on the project which involves remodeling the basement area of Straub Hall for automotive or cognitive laboratories for the Department of Psychology.

'Dance' lecture to be given tonight

The public is invited to a unique event tonight at the University: a biology lecture illustrated by a dance.

"The Protein Synthesis Dance" program will be at 4 p.m. in 123 Science and is part of the Festival of Arts on campus this month. Theme of the Festival is "Two Visions: Science and Art."

Terrie Reeves, University instructor of dance, has choreographed the dance to illustrate a lecture by George Streisinger, professor of biology. The students of Janet Descutner, assistant professor of dance, will perform the dance.

'Art and Technology' subject of lecture

"Film as a Transforming Medium—Art and Technology" is the title of a lecture by film consultant Jack Eyerly of Portland at 8 p.m. today, in 123 Science at the University.

The Festival of Arts now underway is sponsoring Eyerly's free public lecture. Theme of the Festival is "Two Visions: Science and Art." Eyerly, a member of the Board of Film Study, is a consultant to artists from different media and a commentator on modern developments in art, with an interest in technology in the arts.

Journalists compare experiences tonight

For the past three months, Don Bishoff, who writes for the Register-Guard, has been teaching students of journalism. And Dean Rea, who teaches journalism at the University, has been writing for the Register-Guard.

Tonight they will compare notes on their experiences before a regular meeting of Women in Communications, Inc., a professional organization of women journalists.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Central Presbyterian Church—15th and Ferry Streets—and is open to interested persons.

Jackson to serve as counselor

Leonard Jackson, former University varsity basketball player who holds both baccalaureate and masters degrees from the University, has been appointed Assistant Dean of Students in the University's Office of Student Personnel Services.

Jackson, 23, will serve as a counselor, giving students aid with academic problems and assisting in the orientation of new students, particularly during the early orientation-registration next July.

A native of California, Jackson received his bachelor of science degree in sociology from Oregon in 1971 and his master of science degree in counseling psychology in 1972. Professionally, he has been a counselor and tutor in the University's minority programs, a counselor in the DeBusk Center, a counseling supervisor in the Oregon State Prison in fulfillment of requirements of the masters degree, an assistant director of housing for the ASUO, and a graduate teaching fellow in the department of counseling of the College of Education.

Co op nursery school has openings

The Amazon Cooperative Nursery School currently has openings in both the three and four year old classes, according to Ann Billings of the school.

Classes for three year olds are held Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., and tuition is $7 per month, Billings said. Four year olds meet Monday Wednesday and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and tuition is $10 a month, she added.

The school, located on the Amazon Student Housing Project, is open to the public.

Election Court to hear complaints

The ASUO Elections Court will meet at 7 p.m. tonight in the EMU to decide on complaints turned in following the ASUO Senate elections held last November.

Complaints were made by Tom Hartfield, Keith Parrish and Tom Bonner. All three were candidates in the election. Parrish, an incumbent, and Bonner were victorious while Hartfield went down to defeat.

Hartfield's complaint has to do with his ballot slogan being left off both the ASUO Voter's Guide and the primary election ballot during the first day of the primary. He was eliminated from the final election during the primary and contended in his complaint that the absence of his slogan contributed to that.

Parrish turned in a complaint stating he had to show only his plastic identification card to vote in the election when the ASUO constitution states that voters must show both their plastic identification card and current certificate of registration.

Bonner made two complaints—one that successful candidate Steve Maizels and the Emerald violated an election rule in running an advertisement the day of the election and the other that two students who should have been given absentee ballots were refused them.

The room the meeting will be held in will be posted in the EMU.

Peace march planning session tonight

Students interested in participating in and planning the "inauguration day peace march and rally" Jan. 20 can attend a campus organizational meeting tonight.

The meeting, which will be held at 7 p.m. in 112 EMU, is sponsored by the Student Mobilization Committee, one of several peace groups in Eugene planning activities on Inauguration Day.

This Saturday, at 1 p.m., all local peace groups are scheduled to meet at Harris Hall to coordinate long-range planning as well as immediate plans for Inauguration Day activities.
