Hearing

capacity to go to work.

Though most of the women opposing the amendment agreed certain legal inequities do exist, they were unconvinced that a Constitutional amendment is the best way of solving the problems.

"Personally, I like my government close to me," Pamela Wise, representing the Committee for the Preservation of Womanhood, said. "Change the laws on the state level one-by-one. Tell the federal boys no, this time we'll do it ourselves."

Besides trying to answer the arguments against ratification, proponents of the amendment pointed out several areas where women are now legally discriminated against, such as obtaining housing, credit and an education.

The testimony lasted almost three hours, with only a small number of persons scheduled to testify being able to do so due to a time limitation. Testimony on an identical ratification bill introduced last week in the senate will be held at 1 p.m. Monday.

Persons wishing to testify during that hearing can sign up any time before Monday afternoon with the Senate Judiciary Committee, where the bill has been referred.

February speakers cancel

February appearances at the University by Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm and filmmaker William Friedkin have been cancelled, according to the ASUO Cultural Forum.

A forum spokesman said the national booking agency for the two events, Harry Walker, Inc., had advised the University that Chisholm's West Coast speaking tour has been cancelled because the Congresswoman's doctor has ordered her to curtail her outside activities. She was scheduled to speak in Eugene on Feb. 15.

Friedkin, who was to wind up a three-day "William Friedkin Film Festival" with two appearances Feb. 8, was reported unable to keep his appointment because he is still working on his newest film "The Exorcist."

Registrar makes grade option change

Starting Winter term 1973 the Office of the Registrar will accept grade option changes without a department stamp.

Department stamps will be required for drops, adds and credit changes. A $1 charge will continue to be made for each course change.

Composer to present concert-lecture

Romanian composer Alexandre Hrisanide will present a free public concert-lecture today at the Recital Hall of the School of Music at the University as part of the Festival of Arts now under way on the campus.

Theme of the Festival is "Two Visions: Science and Art."

The concert-performance will be at 8 p.m.

He has composed a wide range of pieces, most of which have been published in Europe.

Share-a-ride correction

The Share-a-ride schedule in Tuesday's Emerald had some minor typographical errors.

The corrected schedule can be found in today's Emerald.

Seminar offered today

The Graduate School's Office of Federal Relations will sponsor a seminar today to discuss the provisions of the Higher Education Amendments of 1972. The seminar will be held in the Graduate School lounge from 3:30 until 5 p.m.

Bob Wynia, director of Federal and Temporary Programs for the Oregon Board of Education and a former University faculty member, will analyze provisions of the federal legislation and Joanne Kitchel, director of the Office of Federal Relations will act as discussion leader. Staff members, students, and the public are invited to participate.

Community

Commissioner to speak today

County Commissioner Nancy Hayward will speak to the Lane County DemoForum today at noon. DemoForum is held at the International Kings Table Restaurant in the Oakway Mall. An optional $1.50 lunch is available.

YMCA sponsors communication class

An educational program designed to teach married couples skills in communication will be sponsored by the Central Lane Family YMCA in Eugene beginning Jan. 25. The course which has been developed over the past five years at the University of Minnesota Family Study Center is called Minnesota Couples Communication Program (MCCP).

The premise behind the course is that effective communication requires more than just good intentions. It requires skill.

In MCCP groups, couples identify communication skills they wish to learn. Exercises provide practice in using these skills—with feedback from other couples and the instructors. Couples then transfer their learning back home and share their experiences with the group at the next meeting.

The MCCP course begins Jan. 25, 7-10 p.m. at the YMCA and lasts for four consecutive Thursdays. Each course is limited to six couples. Future courses will be scheduled. The fee is $20 per couple plus one textbook at $6.50. Ed Alora and Mary Bramble are the MCCP instructors. Further information may be obtained by calling the YMCA at 344-6251.

Senate holds first winter meeting

The ASUO Senate is scheduled to hold its first meeting of the winter term at 7 p.m. tonight in Room 101 of the EMU.

The Senate meeting tonight will be only the second since fall term elections in November. Twenty-eight new senators were chosen in that election—just more than half of the 45-member body. The new senators took office at the meeting Dec. 7 and this is the first meeting since then.

Tonight's Senate agenda is expected to include a vote on the rules of procedure submitted by the ASUO Constitution Committee. The Constitution Committee is slated to hear and decide on the constitutionality of the Winkelman Plan for student incidental fee allocation as soon as their rules of procedure are established.
