

Museum to offer art show

Five new exhibits will open at the University Museum of Art on Sunday and remain on view through February 25.

Admission is free to the Museum, which is open from 12 to 5 p.m. daily except Monday when the Museum is closed.

Four of the new shows are the winning entries in the third annual competition sponsored by the Museum's Statewide Services Division.

This is the first time the exhibitions have been on public view, according to Antonio Diez, director of Statewide Services.

The four shows are 21 sculptures by Erik Gronberg, art instructor at the University of Nevada in Las Vegas; a large collection of photographs of hobos and accompanying commentaries by Michael Mathers, who lived with a group of hobos for a year to record their way of life; 13 ceremonial textiles by Barbara Setsu Pickett, Portland, showing new weaving techniques; and a group of 20 black and white ink drawings by Michael Ware, native Oregonian, depicting coastal and other scenes.

The artists won $1,000 prizes in the competition, in which there were 250 entries. Funds were provided by the National Endowment for the Arts through the Oregon Arts Commission, the University and private agencies.

The competition was held last May at Meier & Frank's in downtown Portland.

Also showing in the Museum's Focus Gallery through February 25 will be woven sculptures by Michael Walsh of Eugene.

Foreign students . . .

However, according to some participants of the conference, persons who are believed to be "subversive" by immigration officials find themselves subject to the closest scrutiny and interpretation when it comes to their right to remain in the United States.

According to some, administrative harassment all too often follows legitimate political expression on the part of the student.

Ghent declared that foreign students certainly have the right of free speech. He asserted that both the University and the Foreign Student Office would uphold the foreign student's right to free expression.

Obot believes that foreign students should be aware of their rights but they should stay within their limitations.

The constitutional guarantees of individual freedom and security are applicable to aliens as well as citizens. Aliens are entitled to confrontation and cross examination of witnesses. They are allowed to have counsel but the INS does not provide counsel to those financially unable to pay for it. Aliens have protection against unreasonable search and seizure and they have the right not to incriminate themselves.

In cases involving failure to maintain non-immigrant status, the government lawyer must prove with substantial evidence that the student is working or not attending school.

Any student having difficulties should immediately contact the Foreign Student Office.

FOR MORE EFFICIENT COMBUSTION, OUR '73 VOLVOS HAVE NO CARBURETORS.

Volvos ran fine with carburetors. But they run better without them.

The drawback to carbureted cars is that your foot decides what fuel/air mixture the engine gets. The heavier-handed your foot is, the more gas your engine sucks in.

Our 1973 Volvos, however, have fuel injection. It's controlled by a device slightly more precise than your foot. A brain.

An electronic computer automatically determines the correct fuel/air mixture for every driving condition. Then orders it injected directly into each cylinder. Resulting in more efficient use of your gas. And cleaner exhaust.

So when you notice something missing under the hoods of our 1973 Volvos, don't worry.

You'll never miss it.
