Final hearing set for amendment

A third and final hearing on a measure (HJR 14) that amends the Oregon constitution, upon approval of Oregon voters, to lower the age qualification for legislators to 18 years will be held at 7:30 p.m. today in room 20 of the Capitol.

HJR 14 is being considered by the House Rules Committee, which has heard some testimony on the measure at two previous hearings. Committee chair Rep. Martin Wolfer (D-Salem) scheduled another hearing, however, "because attendance was dismally small at the first two."

Rep. Al Densmore (D-Medford), sponsor of HJR 14, was the only person who testified at the first, largely unpublicized hearing Feb. 9.

A second publicized hearing held Feb. 14 drew four more persons, including three University students who testified in favor of the measure.

Rep. Curtis Wolfer, (D-Silverton) 23, the youngest legislator on the 1973 session, also testified at the Feb. 14 hearing in opposition to the measure.

Several persons under 21 who currently hold county and local office are scheduled to testify tonight including Coos Bay port commissioner Holly Hall, 19, the youngest port commissioner in Oregon.

University students wishing to testify can contact the ASUO legislative coordinators office, 307 EMU for transportation to Salem.
